VEGAS GOLDEN KNIGHTS

THE FIRST WORD

THREE'S A CROWD

DEPENDING ON WHO you believe, it was former Laker Byron Scott or his teammate Wes Matthews who coined "three-peat." What's not in dispute is that their coach, Pat Riley, turned it into coin. Riley's private company trademarked the term in 1988, following L.A.'s back-to-back NBA titles, and Riley cashed in thanks to subsequent successes – and merchandise sales – of the Chicago Bulls (1996-98), New York Yankees (1998-2000) and the Lakers (2000-02).

Riley has yet to receive a cheque from an NHL licensee. He had his first chance the same year his Lakers were going for the triple. The Oilers had just steamrolled to a second straight Cup, going 16-2 in the playoffs and appearing invincible. Then, that August, the unimaginable happened: Wayne Gretzky was traded to Los Angeles, and the dream died. The Oilers made it to the playoffs but blew a 3-1 series lead to…Gretzky and the Kings. Salt, meet wound.

No NHL club has gone Cup[3] since the Islanders went Cup[4] from 1980-83. There have been three other hopefuls beyond the '88 Oilers, and all three were favorites in the post-season:

1985-86 Oilers: Gretzky set the single-season points record (215), Paul Coffey forged a new standard for goals by a defenseman (48) and the Oilers won the Presidents' Trophy. They faced a Calgary team, which was 30 points their lesser, in the second round. A cakewalk became a pie in the face after Edmonton's Steve Smith notoriously banked a shot off Grant Fuhr and into his own goal for the game-winner/loser.

1992-93 Penguins: Some think this was the best Penguins team of all, or would've been had they finished the job. They started the season with a 10-game unbeaten streak and added an all-time best 17-gamer later in the year for fun. Mario Lemieux won the Art Ross Trophy despite missing a quarter of the season, and the club cruised to the Presidents' Trophy. A Round 2 meeting with the Islanders looked like a huge mismatch, especially considering New York's best player, Pierre Turgeon, was injured. Unfortunately for the Pens, David Volek wasn't, and he scored the Game 7 OT-winner to shock the hockey world.

1998-99 Red Wings: A team that went the previous two playoffs without facing an elimination game added Chris Chelios, Wendel Clark, Ulf Samuelsson and Bill Ranford at the trade deadline for their three-peat quest. They gelled at the right time, going 9-2-1 to end the season, then swept Anaheim in Round 1. Round 2 began with two wins in Denver, and ended with an implosion, punctuated by a 45-foot shot in Game 5 by tough guy Jeff Odgers that eluded goalie Chris Osgood, who'd been rushed back from an ankle injury. The run was done.

So what does all of this mean for the 2017-18 Penguins? Simply put, they're facing mission near-impossible. Anyone who picks them, like us, is going way out on a perilous limb (see pg. 42). So many things have to go right for an NHL team – and wrong for their challengers – to win one Cup in this cap-driven era of parity, let alone three in a row. An injury, a bad bounce, a failed trade, complacency, fatigue; take your pick. It's like trying to climb K2, after you've just scaled Kilimanjaro and Mt. Everest. Now there's an idea. If the Penguins win again, we could call it a three-peak™.

'S' IS FOR STORIES

Are the Capitals finished? Will we ever see smaller goalie pads? The game's burning questions make for great 2017-18 plotlines

BY KEN CAMPBELL

WHILE WE HAVE a moment, let's harken to the good old days of the Original 30. The NHL will never be the same, now that the little fraternity is growing. What's next, Seattle? Well, if they ever get their arena situation sorted out, the NHL will perhaps begin holding its breath again. Maybe the league will be faced with that very possibility this season. Regardless, there's no shortage of storylines in 2017-18. Here are some in A-to-Z form:

AUSTON: You could argue that, for the first 99 years of their existence, the Maple Leafs never had a true superstar in their lineup. Then in Year No. 100, Auston Matthews showed up. He'll be looking to build on the best rookie season in franchise history by moving into the NHL's elite, and if that happens, he'll be paid like it.

BOUNCE-BACKS: There's no shortage of players looking to redeem themselves in 2017-18. Alex Galchenyuk is as good a place to start, joined by Anze Kopitar, John Tavares, Bobby Ryan, Tyler Johnson and Jamie Benn.

CURFEW: So who will be the first NHL player busted for a curfew violation in Las Vegas this season? When the Golden Knights landed their franchise, many observers thought they would have a chance to go 41-0-0 on home ice. But if players can get through Nashville with their livers intact, they'll be able to handle Las Vegas.

DALLAS: There might not be a more intriguing team in the NHL than the Stars. Everything old behind the bench is new again with Ken Hitchcock at the controls, and, more importantly, it was widely believed that GM Jim Nill won the summer with his bold player acquisitions.

ESCROW: When it comes to banes of existence for NHL players, it doesn't get much bigger than escrow. It could be the biggest threat to labor peace in a couple of years. The league argues that it's impossible to do things any other way in a system where revenues fluctuate from year to year, but that doesn't assuage the players. To say they hate it would be putting it mildly.

FLORIDA: Actually, the league's two southernmost teams bear watching in 2017-18. Neither Florida nor Tampa Bay made the playoffs last season despite high hopes. The Panthers appear to have hit the reset button, while the Lightning continue to push for a long playoff run in a wide-open Eastern Conference.

GOALIE GEAR: After promising to streamline the stoppers' pads last season, the league managed only to get pants in line, and it had virtually no effect on the number of goals scored. At the time, the NHL said a complete overhaul would be done for the 2017-18 season, but don't hold your breath waiting for the league, the NHL Players' Association and the manufacturers all get on the same page in time.

HURRICANES: Since winning the Stanley Cup in 2006, Carolina has made the playoffs once. But with the summer the Hurricanes had under GM Ron Francis and the stable of young players they've developed, that will change this season. If loading up on former Blackhawks players counts for anything, the Canes are on the rise.

INTERNATIONAL HOCKEY: One of the most underreported aspects of commissioner Gary Bettman's state-of-the-union address during the Cup final was that the league has essentially pulled the plug on the World Cup for 2020 because of uncertainty surrounding the collective bargaining agreement. At one point, it looked as though the league and players were headed toward a comprehensive international schedule that included the Olympics, World Cup and a Ryder Cup-type of competition, but all of those have been scrapped or face uncertain futures.

GRAIG ABEL/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

JACK: The forgotten man in the Connor McDavid-Auston Matthews hysteria is Jack Eichel, whose second NHL season was marred by injury and the Sabres' misery. With a new coach, GM and improved team, will Eichel stay healthy and make the jump into the stratosphere of truly elite NHL players?

KARLSSON: He had the best all-around season of his career in 2016-17, and it wasn't enough to win the Norris. Look for Erik Karlsson to be very much in the Norris debate again. And if he plays the way he did in the playoffs, the Hart debate as well.

LAINE: At a time when there is a ton of young talent coming out of Finland, nobody is as dynamic as Jets sniper Patrik Laine. He missed eight games with a concussion and still managed 36 goals as an 18-year-old. Is a 50-goal season on the horizon?

MCDAVID: Even though Connor McDavid's eight-year, $100-million extension doesn't kick in until next season, his signing has created an enormous amount of hype and expectation. He'll live up to it and make the Oilers a Stanley Cup contender "in short order" as GM Peter Chiarelli predicted when McDavid signed.

NICO & NOLAN: Nico Hischier, the first Swiss player drafted first overall in NHL history, rose from relative unknown to crown jewel in one year, overtaking Nolan Patrick, who was long expected to go No. 1. Which rookie will make a bigger immediate impact? Nico will inherit a major role right away on the talent-starved Devils, while Patrick, a big two-way pivot, lands on a deeper depth chart in Philly but also in a more successful team environment.

OLYMPICS: Now that the NHL has taken a pass on showcasing its product to the world in a huge Asian market, it will be up to each country to form a national team the way it did prior to the 1998 Games. The Russians, who have failed spectacularly during the NHL era, enter the Pyeongchang tourney as the prohibitive favorite for gold.

PRONGER: One of the most outspoken players in the history of the game, Chris Pronger has finally been removed from his contract obligations as a player. So he left the NHL's front office and jumped on the fast track to team management with a job as senior advisor to Panthers GM Dale Tallon. Pronger will put his stamp on this team early and decisively.

QUENNEVILLE: GM Stan Bowman promised big changes after the Blackhawks lost in Round 1 for the second straight season. Some believed even coach Joel Quenneville, a man many think is the best coach in the game, could be gone. In the end, only assistant Mike Kitchen was let go, but it's a situation worth watching.

REDEMPTION: Any notion that teams are not just crossing their fingers and hoping when it comes to goaltending should be shot down immediately. Steve Mason, Brian Elliott and Mike Smith were all goalies who had subpar seasons yet were coveted by other teams. They all need to be better to make those moves worthwhile.

SLASHING: It's become an epidemic in the NHL, but rectifying it seems simple. Just call the slashing rules as they're written in the rulebook. The GMs discussed it at their meeting at the draft, and there's an appetite to do something about slashes close to the hands, but nothing formal was presented.

TRIFECTA: The Penguins did what most people thought was impossible by winning back-to-back Stanley Cups. After losing some key components of their roster, can they become the first team to win three NHL titles in a row since the Islanders dynasty of the early 1980s?

UNIFORMS: Adidas and the NHL unveiled the new AdiZero Form the Future sweaters (yes, they're sweaters, not jerseys) that all 31 teams will wear this season. Along with the new-look Vegas Golden Knights, a total of 13 teams have altered their appearance.

VIGILANTE: Speaking of the Penguins, they used a first-round pick to get Ryan Reaves, a useful fourth-line player who will be there to keep the team's stars from being abused. They did this because they have no confidence in the league doing it for them. Pittsburgh GM Jim Rutherford actually predicted some of their games might become, and we quote, "a s--- show."

WASHINGTON...OR WINDOW: In either case, it applies. The Capitals had a, well, interesting off-season, with GM Brian MacLellan admitting his team faced championship-team contract decisions without the championships. The window to win a Stanley Cup is closing fast, if it hasn't been slammed shut already.

XEROSERE: "The succession or communities which originate in extremely dry habitat such as a sand desert..." is how this word is defined. Two of those communities are Vegas and Arizona, teams that bear watching for entirely different reasons. The Golden Knights are new and exciting while the Coyotes are sick of the perpetual rebuild and finally looking to win now.

Y2K: Ready to feel old? This year's draft class is the first of the new millennium, featuring kids who were born in 2000. Early contenders for No. 1 are defenseman Rasmus Dahlin and right winger Andrei Svechnikov, who dominated in the USHL and will now play for the OHL's Barrie Colts.

ZETTERBERG: GM Ken Holland said Henrik Zetterberg's number "is going to the rafters" once he retires and has no interest in moving him, even though Zetterberg is 36 with four years left on his deal and the Red Wings are in rebuild mode. 'Z' remains productive and provides great leadership, but he's facing some lean years for the first time in his accomplished career.

WHAT'S New

UNIFORMS

WITH THE VEGAS Golden Knights reveal used as a jump-off, the NHL unveiled new uniforms for all 31 franchises, designed by new provider Adidas. The ADIZERO jerseys were constructed to be up to 19 percent lighter than the previous NHL sweaters, with an emphasis on the crest. Clima technology was instituted for a cooler fit, with a streamline silhouette and materials that maximize air flow lending a hand. Tougher fabrics were also put through burst and abrasion tests to make sure the jerseys can stand up to the rigors of an NHL workload. In terms of design, there wasn't a lot of change, though teams such as Minnesota and San Jose look particularly good.

MARC-ANDRE FLEURY

VEGAS

THE NHL GAINS its 31st franchise this season with the Vegas Golden Knights ready to go. An expansion draft netted the league's newest team some big names such as Marc-Andre Fleury, James Neal and Jason Garrison, not to mention some future goodies via trade (Shea Theodore and Alex Tuch being the most prominent).

Vegas will be the eighth team in the Pacific Division, leaving the Central as the only division with seven squads. The Los Angeles Kings, Anaheim Ducks and Arizona Coyotes all seem like natural geographic rivals, and no one's going to give the little brother a break.

Perhaps the most intriguing aspect of the first Vegas lineup is the level of expected transiency. The Knights traded away several of their expansion selections shortly after choosing them, while many of their prominent pickups (Neal, David Perron and Jonathan Marchessault among them) are eligible for unrestricted free agency next summer. So don't be surprised if Vegas is active around the trade deadline, dumping bodies in favor of future assets.

Vegas will play its home games at T-Mobile Arena, located just off the city's famous Strip. Every joke in the world has already been made about the Knights' home-ice advantage, but at least the players have already been briefed on life in the city that doesn't involve towering neon and novelty-sized booze containers.

As for visiting opponents? They better remember to mind their manners in Sin City and stay straight for game time. "You gotta be ready when the puck drops," Marchessault said. "And we'll be ready."

JERSEYS: ADIDAS HOCKEY; FLEURY: JEFF VINNICK/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES; T-MOBILE ARENA: ETHAN MILLER/GETTY IMAGES

COACHES

THERE HAS BEEN a lot of turnover in bench personnel, with eight different franchises hiring new coaches. Vegas had no choice, of course, and in nabbing popular players' coach GERARD GALLANT, the Golden Knights took one of the best options out of the field early. Gallant's exit from Florida was seen as a colossal misstep by the Panthers, and in Vegas he'll be reunited with former Panthers players Reilly Smith and Jonathan Marchessault. Another positive influence will be PHIL HOUSLEY in Buffalo, where the former Sabres defenseman returns with Stanley Cup final experience from Nashville. Housley has had a quick ascent in the coaching world, first making a splash by leading Team USA to a gold medal at the 2013 World Junior Championship. Since then, he has helped the Predators ice one of the most impressive defense corps in the NHL. And wouldn't you know it? Buffalo needs a lot of help on the back end.

PHIL HOUSLEY

KEN HITCHCOCK brings structure and defensive acumen to Dallas, where the Stars sorely need such a man, while JOHN STEVENS also brings great detail work to Los Angeles. Both the Stars and Kings are looking to rebound in a big way this year.

BOB BOUGHNER will be calculated in Florida, and he'll get on players if they need a push. Similarly, RICK TOCCHET impressed the Arizona brass with his "steely presence" and command of a room. Winning the past two Cups as an assistant coach in Pittsburgh doesn't hurt, either. DOUG WEIGHT, another well-respected former NHLer, shed the "interim" tag in taking over the Islanders. TRAVIS GREEN, another former NHLer, finally gets his crack at a big-league bench in Vancouver. He's known for his teaching ability, which is exactly what the Canucks' young talent needs.

GENERAL MANAGERS

TECHNICALLY, Dale Tallon got reshuffled back to his old job in Florida, but the Panthers need the veteran hockey mind to get down to business right away. The franchise has struggled to find an identity lately, but giving Tallon his GM post back at least brings a sense of order. Now the mission is to get the Panthers back in the playoffs – something that Florida has done just once in the past five tries. Another scuffling franchise in the Atlantic Division is Buffalo, and the Sabres will head into the new season with JASON BOTTERILL at the helm. Botterill made a name for himself in Pittsburgh and has already bolstered Buffalo's sad blueline.

DALE TALLON

Speaking of defense, ROB BLAKE wasn't too bad at that position during his playing days, but now he'll have to defend his personnel decisions as GM of the Kings. It's been a swift fall from grace for L.A., but the reset is on, and Blake's priority will be to find a formula that gets the team back into the playoffs. Los Angeles has a lot of vets on big-money contracts, so he'll have to be deft in his maneuvering.

If he needs to make a move, perhaps he'll call GEORGE MCPHEE, who officially has a roster to manage in Las Vegas now. McPhee has already presided over an expansion draft that netted him some nice future assets, while his scouting staff absolutely owned the entry draft, getting high skill with three first-round selections. But here comes the hard part: McPhee and his fellow Golden Knights execs must now form an identity and a core in Vegas, and that won't be easy. The team is very weak down the middle, and it's not easy to procure top-line NHL centers. But that's the fun of building, right?

LITTLE CAESARS ARENA

THE DETROIT RED WINGS finally have a new home. As iconic as Joe Louis Arena was, the old gal was definitely showing her age (born in 1979) and the Wings needed an upgrade. In Little Caesars Arena, Detroit has a showstopper. The rink will feature the world's largest center-hung scoreboard, with four under-mount displays for fans who are closer to the ice. The new facility, which will seat 20,000 for hockey and also serve as the home of the NBA's Pistons, is part of an enormous 50-block development in the city called The District Detroit, which mixes venues, restaurants and housing in five newly created neighborhoods downtown.

Rookie REPORT

The league's top freshmen won't necessarily be 2017 draftees. Watch out for the older crowd

BY RYAN KENNEDY

WE'VE GOT A wide-open race this year, folks. Whereas 2016-17 was always going to be dominated by Auston Matthews and Patrik Laine, expect "older" rookies to play a bigger role in this season's Calder Trophy chase. Will Nico Hischier and Nolan Patrick be in the mix? Sure. But there's also a host of players who torched the NCAA ranks and/or have already seen some pro hockey who should definitely be on your radar this fall. Let's take a look at the early rookie of the year candidates.

NICO HISCHIER

NEW JERSEY, C

Hischier, 2017's No. 1 overall draft pick, will be expected to step in and provide some punch. But the Swiss can't-miss has the fortune of going to a Devils team that should afford him ample opportunity. With a combination of skill, smarts and motor, he typically does better than expected under pressure. That the Devils have some talent to play off (Taylor Hall being the most prominent) means Hischier won't have to do everything himself to create offense.

THOMAS CHABOT

OTTAWA, D

The Senators are high on Chabot – heck, who wouldn't be? – and the slick, puck-moving D-man has the chance to be an impact player on a blueline already blessed with Erik Karlsson. That cover will allow Chabot to hone his game in a good situation, and the youngster has figured out some good pro habits from the time he spent with the organization last season before he was returned to junior. His homework results? An MVP nod at the world juniors and a QMJHL title with Saint John.

CHARLIE MCAVOY

BOSTON, D

Soon, the Zdeno Chara era will end in Boston. And while filling his skates is impossible, the Bruins can still torture on the back end in a different, more mobile way thanks to players like Torey Krug and McAvoy. The ex-Boston University star already has a signature performance at the world juniors under his belt and some NHL playoff experience. He also has a fearlessness that bodes well for the future, as he combines it with excellent skating to break the puck out of the zone and create offense in a way that really works in the NHL right now.

CLAYTON KELLER

ARIZONA, C

If there were an heir apparent to Patrick Kane, it would be Keller. And fortunately for Arizona fans, they'll get to see him play against the Blackhawks wizard. Keller, along with Dylan Strome, represents the bold future of the Coyotes, which promises to be young and skilled. Keller has already dipped his toes in the pros, but this year we'll get the full treatment. His combination of creativity and dexterous hands make him a treat to watch with the puck.

JOEL ERIKSSON EK

MINNESOTA, C

Getting shuttled around isn't usually a good sign, but Eriksson Ek made an impact wherever he travelled last season. He showed well early with Minnesota, then played forcefully for Sweden at the WJC. He was excellent back in Sweden for Farjestad, then came back to the Wild in the playoffs. With his size, two-way game and competitive nature, he brings a ton of goodies to the Wild. And now they've got more room on their roster after jettisoning some expensive veterans in the off-season.

NOLAN PATRICK

PHILADELPHIA, C

Patrick is one of the season's biggest X-factors. He spent the early part of the summer recovering from a second sports hernia surgery, an operation that was supposed to put his health issues to bed. Patrick joins a Flyers forward corps that already has a lot of talent (Giroux, Voracek, Simmonds, etc.), so a scoring role isn't guaranteed, but his defensive game is advanced enough he could contribute immediately without having to amass a pile of points.

MIKHAIL SERGACHEV

TAMPA BAY, D

You don't just trade Jonathan Drouin away for cap relief. Sure, it helped matters in Tampa Bay, but getting Sergachev in return was crucial to a Lightning team firmly in its Stanley Cup window. While Sergachev doesn't have to be a star right away, he does have the size, two-way game and skating ability to be an effective NHLer for the Bolts. The fact he's coming off a Memorial Cup championship with the OHL's Windsor Spitfires adds to his impressive resume.

OWEN TIPPETT

FLORIDA, RW

There's always one kid who surprisingly goes straight from the draft stage to the NHL (last year it was Arizona's Jakob Chychrun) and Tippett is a good bet to be 2017's entry. The Panthers have already said the high-scoring winger will be given a chance to crack the roster right away, and with a dearth of talent on the wings, they could use him. Tippett has NHL size and a heavy shot, so as long as he can keep up on the defensive end, he'll be an instant contributor.

TYSON JOST

COLORADO, C

It's going to be pretty messy in Colorado again. But with chaos comes opportunity, and Jost is the type of prospect who can seize upon that. An advanced player who was excellent in his one and only campaign with the University of North Dakota, Jost joined the Avs late in the season and didn't look out of place in six games. His versatility will help him find a place in the lineup, and since the Avs are in the midst of a treacherous rebuild, there's no reason not to give the kid space to grow.

BROCK BOESER

VANCOUVER, RW

Hope is starting to spring in Vancouver, and Boeser is one of the gems making it possible. After an exemplary career at the University of North Dakota that included a national title as a freshman, Boeser turned pro and didn't miss a beat, pumping in four goals during a nine-game NHL trial. Finding chemistry with Bo Horvat was a great sign, and Boeser's combination of size and shooting acumen make him the type of threat Vancouver hasn't had in a while.

Free Agent WATCH

Yes, the draft is the best way to build, but who likes waiting? A solid UFA signing has an immediate impact with no downside. Here are the top five from this summer and five to watch for 2018

BY RYAN KENNEDY

2017-18: Call it the Season of Reason. For once, teams weren't falling over each other on July 1st with wallets splayed open, ready to toss a fortune at anyone on the free market. Similarly, players didn't just take as much money and term as possible; they considered fit and flexibility. Sure, there were some overpays, but not many that could be considered tragic. Let's look at the best value signings.

KEVIN SHATTENKIRK, NY RANGERS

Make no mistake, Shattenkirk, the most coveted free agent on the board, could've taken more term and more cash. But the New York native loved the fit in Manhattan, so he accepted a bit of a pre-emptive hometown discount. The best part? He's the right-handed shot partner that captain Ryan McDonagh needs on the first pairing.

CONTRACT: 4 YEARS, $6.6 MILLION AAV

BRIAN BOYLE, NEW JERSEY

The Devils are likely destined for another season or two of hurt, but bringing in the towering presence of Boyle – both literally and figuratively – adds leadership and stability. The veteran will be a great dressing room presence for youngsters such as Nico Hischier and Pavel Zacha while serving as a key bottom-six forward and penalty killer. And hey, if it doesn't work out, his contract makes him enticing at the trade deadline.

TREVOR DALEY, DETROIT

Like the Devils, the Red Wings are entering dark and foreboding territory – a rebuild. In Daley, Detroit gets a mobile, puck-moving defenseman who has also been part of two consecutive Stanley Cup championships in Pittsburgh. That kind of experience will help a Wings roster that will grow up around Daley as the franchise endures what will be a bumpy period.

MICHAEL DEL ZOTTO, VANCOUVER

There is a lot of opportunity in Vancouver right now. The team has some good young kids poking up, but they'll need support and Del Zotto fits the bill. He comes to the West Coast cheaply, but his puck-moving abilities will be valuable as the Canucks attempt to find their way back to NHL relevancy.

CONTRACT: 2 YEARS, $3 MILLION AAV

MARTIN HANZAL, DALLAS

We know the Stars are going for it. And while the contract for UFA signing Alex Radulov (five years at $6.25 AAV) might make fans squeamish in a few years, Hanzal comes in at a reasonable term and dollar amount. The big pivot is the perfect third-line threat for Dallas, and he'll still be a solid NHLer when the contract expires.

CONTRACT: 3 YEARS, $4.7 MILLION AAV

2018-19: There are some absolute titans up for unrestricted free agency next summer – Joe Thornton, Rick Nash, the Sedins – but they're in the twilight stage of their careers. Younger UFAs in the class will have bigger impacts on the field, whether they re-sign with their current squads or test the open market. Who are the top five who will have GMs – and fans – salivating?

JOHN TAVARES, NY ISLANDERS

This is the big one. Speculation has run rampant on J.T. for more than a year already, mostly because the Islanders' arena situation has been such a gong show. Tavares, the team captain and leading man, has been committed to the organization for a long time and has always done more than his share both on and off the ice. But will the latest arena kerfuffle finally push him away?

CURRENT CAP HIT: $5.5 MILLION

JAMES VAN RIEMSDYK, TORONTO

He's been a bargain in Toronto, but that won't last if 'JVR' hits the open market. Since he arrived in the NHL so early, van Riemsdyk, 28, can become a free agent while still in the prime of his career, which makes him an attractive UFA option. Thanks to his size and hands, van Riemsdyk brings a net-front presence most teams could really use.

CURRENT CAP HIT: $4.2 MILLION

KYLE TURRIS, OTTAWA

A solid faceoff man and two-way producer, Turris is underpaid right now and due for a significant raise. He teeters between being a top-line center and a second-line center, depending on the cast around him, but he is undoubtedly Ottawa's top dog. If the Senators want to keep him, it'll cost them.

CURRENT CAP HIT: $3.5 MILLION

CAM ATKINSON, COLUMBUS

Atkinson has seen his production climb steadily the past few seasons and happens to be cresting just when he needs a new contract. Undersized but effective thanks to his speed and hockey sense, he's the type of player who is no longer overlooked by teams, and the Blue Jackets will have to pay a pretty penny to keep him from being lured away by outside suitors.

CURRENT CAP HIT: $3.5 MILLION

JOHN CARLSON, WASHINGTON

The top defenseman available, Carlson gets a bonus push on that alone. He gets another bump for being a right-handed shot, plus his Capitals already have three bluliners under contract for more than $5 million each now and in 2018-19. Can Washington hold on to this two-way gem, or will Carlson continue the exodus out of D.C.?

FANTASTIC FOUR

No Weber, no Suter, no Jones? No problem. Nashville pumps out elite defensemen like the city churns out country hits, and the Predators boast the NHL's best blueline quartet

BY KEN CAMPBELL

NASHVILLE PREDATORS

DAVID POILE IS, by nature, as soft-spoken and unpretentious a person as you're ever likely to meet. But even he's not above the occasional humblebrag. The day before the Stanley Cup final, he stepped out of character for just a moment. "Thirty-five years as a GM, I've only had four coaches," he said. "That's awesome. I'm not sure anyone in any other sport will come close to that." No doubt, but he's gilding the lily just a little. He's actually had five coaches. The Jim Schoenfeld Era must have just slipped his mind. Defensemen? Well, he's gone through a lot more of those, 147 to be exact. He's had everyone from A (Jamie Allison) to Z (Rob Zettler) with the exception of X. He's employed two Brookbanks, two Cotes, two Webers, a John and a Jonathon Blum. He's had Hall of Famers, some very good defensemen, some not-so-good defensemen and some that probably upset his stomach so much he had to reach for an Alexander Sulzer.

Poile has also assembled hockey's version of the Fantastic Four, a group of defensemen without peer in the NHL. With all due respect to Matt Irwin and Yannick Weber, the foursome comprised of Roman Josi, Ryan Ellis, P.K. Subban and Mattias Ekholm were the drivetrain that powered Nashville's catfish-tossing romp to the Stanley Cup final by munching minutes, shutting down some of the game's biggest stars and generally being dynamic at both ends of the ice. Poile has always built his teams on goaltending and defense, and while there is some scoring punch in the lineup now, in the form of Filip Forsberg, Ryan Johansen and Viktor Arvidsson, there's little doubt the men behind the blueline are the real rock, er, country stars in Music City. The Predators attack "with a five-man mentality," according to Ellis, which makes their top-four the most dangerous group of offense-minded defenders in the NHL today.

And to think this blueline once had Ryan Suter, Shea Weber and Seth Jones on it. Suter left via free agency and Weber and Jones through trades, yet the Predators had such a surplus of depth on the blueline that they remained one of the league's elite defending teams, one that was good enough to get to the Cup final without two of the league's premier veteran defenseman and one who is a star in the making. And if you'll indulge Poile one more time, a little more bragging is in order. "It's remarkable, it really is," he said. "We did it. I don't know if I should have done it, but we did it."

With three of the four defensemen under contract for at least the next two seasons – and Josi, Ekholm and Ellis on ridiculously team-friendly deals – the future looks promising for the Predators, who last spring graduated from 19 years of being a plucky underdog to becoming a force on and off the ice. Much will now be expected of them, and there's no reason to think that much won't be delivered by Smashville's Big Four. After some early season bumps in the road in 2016-17, the four meshed into Josi-Ellis and Subban-Ekholm tandems that can play in any situation and thrive. There was a time when the Predators could count on losing every top defenseman whose contract expired, first with Kimmo Timonen in 2007, then Dan Hamhuis in 2010 and Suter in 2012. "It really gives you a sick feeling to your stomach," Poile said. "That's no way to run an organization."

But here's the thing. One player's departure became another's coming-out party. It wasn't until Suter left that Josi emerged as a front-line defenseman and perfect partner for Weber. And the progression of Ekholm and Ellis made it possible for Poile to trade Jones for the No. 1 center the Preds so desperately lacked, though Poile acknowledged he might've been even tougher to move than Weber. "I mean, you have Seth Jones. Perfect." Poile said. "Perfect draft, perfect pick, perfect player. He's only going to play about 20 years in the league. Why are we going to trade Seth Jones? Believe me, I offered Jarmo (Columbus GM Kekalainen) everything and anything on our team not to trade Seth Jones, but we weren't going to win without a No. 1 center, and whether you believe that's Ryan Johansen or not, the point is we weren't going to win without a No. 1 center. You could go all day with Seth Jones and have the best defense, but we weren't going to win. At the moment, it's a deal that has played out correctly for us. But that's a deal that Columbus will never regret, because they got a guy for 20 years."

The Predators have what they want, too, and they like it, as they should. Here's a closer look at Smashville's Fantastic Four and a little about what makes each one tick.

SELF-MADE MAN
Poile earned his GM-of-the-year award by enjoying success in 2016-17 with a team founded largely on his bold moves, from shocking trades to bargain signings.

THE SWISS ARMY KNIFE

ROMAN JOSI

• POILE ACQUISITION NO. 125 •

ACQUIRED: The Predators dealt the 46th and 76th overall picks in the 2008 draft to the Coyotes to move up to No. 38 to take Josi. "Jeff Kealty (Nashville's chief amateur scout) was banging his fist on the table telling us we had to get this guy," said assistant GM Paul Fenton. "As far as Swiss defensemen, everybody was talking about Luca Sbisa (who went 19th), but Jeff liked Roman way more."

AFTER THE MORNING skate before Game 1 of the Stanley Cup final, Roman Josi stood at his stall still half-dressed talking about the man-crush he has on Swiss tennis star Roger Federer. He's met him a couple times and is good friends with his coach, Severin Luthi, and Josi has an encyclopedic knowledge of Federer's career. Josi recalled without hesitation the first of Federer's 93 (and counting) title wins, including his 19 Grand Slams, in 2003 at Wimbledon over Mark Philippoussis when Josi was just 13. Josi, who admitted he'd almost start crying whenever Federer lost, could recall Federer's defeats, too. At Wimbledon in 2010, Josi sat disconsolately in the stands with his friends after watching the No. 1-seeded Federer lose to No. 12-seeded Tomas Berdych in the quarterfinal. "I would say he's my best friend," said Josi with a laugh. "Actually, I think he might be a little creeped out if he knew how much I know about him."

NET PRESENCE
Josi is a tennis fanatic who, naturally, idolizes fellow Swiss star Roger Federer. Josi said he's almost embarrassed by how much he knows about Federer's career.

OFFENSE DRAWS ATTENTION, BUT HIS DEFENSE IS EQUALLY GOOD. HE'S AS CONSISTENT A PLAYER AS THERE IS IN THE NHL

– PETER LAVIOLETTE ON ROMAN JOSI

Like his idol, Josi has a remarkable sense of self. And like Federer, he has an uncanny ability to put disappointing losses in the past immediately. Unlike Federer, though, "I'm terrible at the net. That's why I don't play doubles." He's talking about the net in tennis, of course, because in hockey, whether it's guarding the Predators' net or attacking the opposing one, few do both better than Josi. In fact, coach Peter Laviolette calls Josi, "an excellent 200-foot defenseman" – a term usually reserved for Selke Trophy-caliber forwards. "For me, it's about somebody who's good at any point on the ice, offensively and defensively and any point between that," Laviolette said. "Maybe a lot of times it does refer to a forward, not a guy like (Josi) or Mattias Ekholm who really like to take the puck and can go 200 feet with it. Offense always draws your attention, but I guess what I'm saying is his defense is equally good for me. He's as consistent a player as there is in the National Hockey League."

There was a time not long ago when Josi was looking up the depth chart at Suter and Weber, but when Suter left via free agency in 2012, that moved Josi into his spot alongside Weber. The two thrived as a pairing, and Josi almost matched Weber point-for-point during the next four seasons, with 174 to Weber's 180. The two have different strengths – Josi is more of a puckhandler while Weber has the big shot and a good first pass – but they complemented each other perfectly. After Weber was dealt to Montreal, Josi became a leader last season for the Predators, proving beyond all doubt he wasn't riding anyone's coattails.

THE BEARD

RYAN ELLIS

• POILE ACQUISITION NO. 126 •

ACQUIRED: With defensemen Victor Hedman and Oliver Ekman-Larsson and (oops) Jared Cowen already selected, the Predators nabbed Ellis at No. 11 overall in the 2009 draft. "When he was still on the board at 11, it was like, 'Write his name down as fast as you can,' " Fenton said.

WHEN BOB BOUGHNER and Warren Rychel were recruiting Ryan Ellis to play major junior in Windsor, they weren't quite sure where he lived, but their search ended abruptly when they reached 19 Savona Crescent, in the tiny Hamilton suburb of Freelton, Ont. "The first thing they said when they got here is, 'Your garage door looks like Swiss cheese,' " said Ryan's father, Jim.

That's because the driveway was where Ryan spent countless hours with his father working on the shot that has become Ryan's calling card in the NHL. The garage door wasn't of the highest quality, Jim is quick to acknowledge. Ryan would make the initial indentation, and then two or three more to the same place would put a hole through it. All those hours produced a shot that has been lethal since he was a kid. Jim recalled a couple times in minor hockey when Ryan actually put the puck through the mesh. "That's been my thing forever," Ryan said. " I think I was the first 8-year-old who could raise the puck from the blueline."

Jim could never coach his son's teams because of the unpredictability of his shift work at the Ford plant in nearby Oakville, but every time he worked the dayshift, he'd come home and the two would head out to the driveway. When Jim was too tired, he'd simply roll or kick the ball to his son. Ryan recalled it as a bonding experience, saying, "It was the most fun, it was time I got to spend with my dad." So even if Ryan hadn't developed his lethal shot, it would have still been time well spent.

As anyone can tell you, though, it takes a lot more than a booming shot to become a bona fide NHL defenseman. There were growing pains for Ellis, who has seen his offensive totals rise every season. For him, the turning point came when Laviolette took over for Barry Trotz behind the bench and gave him the kind of ice time he needed to make an impact. When Ellis signed his current deal in 2014, he was playing about 16 minutes a game under Trotz. He had no way of knowing he'd average almost 24 under Laviolette, with Josi as his partner two years later. Ellis also didn't know he'd have one of the best shooting percentages among defensemen in the league. His 11.4 percent in 2016-17 was fourth in the NHL and tops on the Predators blueline by a mile.

As a result, Ellis didn't exactly bet on himself. He signed a five-year contract worth $12.5 million, which means he has two years left on a deal that'll pay him just $2.5 million per season. That makes him perhaps the best bargain in the NHL today. But he can take solace in knowing his payday will come and that he has blossomed into an elite-level defenseman under Laviolette. "I had done it at every level and I knew I could bring it," said Ellis, who won two Memorial Cups and a gold medal at the world juniors. "It was just a matter of getting a chance. When you're young and playing only 14 minutes a night, that's not much of an opportunity. But 'Lavi' comes in and lets me play 23 minutes a night. That's the chance you get, and a lot of players need that opportunity to show what they have."

PUT ME IN, COACH
Ellis won at every level before the NHL and always believed he'd become a good pro. He just needed more playing time and he finally got it when Nashville changed bench bosses.

I THINK I WAS THE FIRST 8-YEAR-OLD WHO COULD RAISE THE PUCK FROM THE BLUELINE

THE BEAST
MATTIAS EKHOLM

• POILE ACQUISITION NO. 127 •

ACQUIRED: Ekholm had already been passed over in the 2008 NHL draft when Preds scout Lucas Bergman had Fenton and Kealty watch him play in an under-19 tournament in Europe. "He was purely an offensive guy who was really cherished for his offensive ability," Fenton said. "We got him in the fourth round (in 2009), but if you did that draft over, he'd be right near the top of the first round."

IF YOU GO to Wikipedia, this is what it says about the town where Ekholm first played hockey: "Furudal is a locality situated in Raatvik Municipality, Dalarna County, Sweden, with 407 inhabitants in 2010." That's it. No wonder they couldn't find enough defensemen to play for them. It was there that Ekholm played forward until he was 14 when he was moved back to defense after the coach asked him to fill in. "There was me and another guy, and the coach said, 'You guys try to play 'D' for just one game,' " Ekholm recalled. "It was going to just be a game. It was one game, then it was two games, then it was five games and I just stuck with it. And from there it took two years and I was on a junior team."

Good call. That's not to say that with his size (6-foot-4, 215 pounds) and skating ability Ekholm wouldn't have made for a nasty piece of work to deal with in front of the net as a power forward, but his value is on defense where he can be on the ice more often and have a greater impact. When Subban was traded to Nashville, the initial thought was to have him play with Josi, leaving the Ekholm-Ellis pairing intact. But after some early speed bumps, Ellis was matched with Josi and Ekholm with Subban on what became a dynamic pairing. There might not be a better-skating defense tandem in the NHL. "I think the obvious was to put Roman Josi and P.K. together, right?" Laviolette said. "As it turned out, the numbers and the eyeballs all pointed to Roman and Ryan being a terrific pair. Ekholm and Subban are a really, really big, strong, tough pair to play against. They've been able to handle a lot of minutes and a lot of big opponents."

That much was clear as the Predators rumbled through the playoffs shutting down some of the league's top offensive players – Jonathan Toews, Patrick Kane, Vladimir Tarasenko, Ryan Getzlaf and Corey Perry among them. There was even a point in the Stanley Cup final when the Penguins looked frustrated with their lack of production, in large part due to the job Subban and Ekholm did on Sidney Crosby early in the series.

Those who watch Ekholm closely have always appreciated what he brings, but the playoffs were the real eye-opener for the rest of the hockey world. What stood out most was his skating ability, which helps him in all areas of the ice. He's not afraid to join the rush and create odd-man situations for his team, and if he gets caught, he has the speed to get back into the play. He has the size to contain forwards but doesn't sacrifice his offensive acumen to sit back and defend. And, as he displayed during the final, he's sneaky-dirty, particularly after the whistle. "If you're playing top guys, they're all highly skilled players, and to make them feel like they don't have any room out there, you have to stay in front of them in their face and after the whistles make sure you let them know you're there," Ekholm said. "That's been working for me. I'm trying to push it to the limit where I don't get a penalty, but I'm right on the edge."

FEAR FACTOR
At 6-foot-4 and 215 pounds, Ekholm is already an imposing specimen, but he gets in his rivals' heads further by roughing them up after plays are whistled dead.

THE FRANCHISE
P.K. SUBBAN

• POILE ACQUISITION NO. 146 •

ACQUIRED: "I had never talked to Marc (Montreal Canadiens GM Bergevin) about it, and we sat beside each other at the GM meetings (at the 2016 draft), and I said, 'I'm hearing all this stuff. Are you trading this guy or not trading this guy?' " Poile recalled. "One thing led to another and he said, 'People are calling, and I'm not trying to trade him.' So I pushed a little more and said, 'Do you want to talk about something? If I was to do this, would you have interest?' That was, as I call it, the big gulp for both of us. We spoke a little bit at the draft and we both got back to Montreal and Nashville, gulped some more and then..."

WE DIDN'T WANT to make this all about P.K. Subban, and that's very difficult, because it's always all about P.K. Subban. A prime example was Media Day before the Cup final. The good folks at NHL Network asked him to grab a microphone and start asking questions of his teammates. He felt obliged to comply. That led to this exchange between him and Ellis...

Ellis: "Imagine playing with P.K. Subban. I mean, it's a dream come true. That's all it is."

Subban: "And you've seen him in the shower?"

Ellis: "I try to avoid that part."

Sometimes the spotlight is foisted upon Subban, yet sometimes he brings it upon himself, like the aftermath of his exchange with

Sidney Crosby at the end of game Game 3. Subban said Crosby told him his breath stinks and that it perplexed him because he uses Listerine. Actual footage of their exchange showed it was nothing more than an F-you contest, but it turned into a sideshow. Subban played it for all it was worth, basking in the limelight and doing nothing to discourage it, until he didn't speak for three days leading up to Game 6. Whether he was shut down by his team or by himself, it seemed an odd turn of events. Even the league couldn't broker a deal to make him available. "A lot of guys have been saying my breath is tough," he said at the time. "But it's because I have a high-protein diet. No, seriously, a high-protein diet results in bad breath. But I can't afford to take protein out of my diet now. So people are just going to have to suck it up for the next week or so."

How successful is Subban? Well, consider that his father, Karl, a former principal in Toronto, has published a book titled, How We Did It: The Subban Plan for Success in Hockey, School and Life. The plan has worked without a doubt. Not only is Subban wildly talented, he has what it takes to truly become the face of the NHL, on and off the ice. Yet as well as his act played in Nashville last season, it rubs some people the wrong way, which goes back to the genesis of his trade from the Canadiens in the first place. One thing is clear, though. Subban is going to hit some rough patches on this front until he starts to pick his spots. Perhaps he just has to learn to say no.

Case in point was his first visit to Nashville after the trade last summer. As he toured around town, he found himself in Tootsie's, the world-famous bar that's a seeing-eye wrist shot away from Bridgestone Arena. His first night in his new home, Subban was up on stage singing Johnny Cash. "When I got traded, it wasn't like it popped in my head that I was going to fly to Nashville and perform Folsom Prison Blues on stage at Tootsie's," Subban said. "The owner is like, 'Why don't you sing us a song? Yeah, get up there.' What am I going to say? No? Everyone is looking at me, so I just hopped up there and did it."

CHICKEN VS. EGG
Does Subban seek attention or does he simply react to cameras thrust in his face? It's tough to say which force drives the other. Regardless, few players entertain like he can.

NASHVILLE PREDATORS

Subban scored a goal in his first game with the Predators, and even though he missed 16 games in December and January with an upper-body injury, he still managed 40 points. He's formed one of the league's elite shutdown pairings with Ekholm and seems to have toned down his penchant for running around and trying to do too much, in no small part because of the company he keeps on Nashville's blueline. It's impossible to determine whether the Preds would've gone to the final anyway had they not traded for Subban, but it's irrelevant. He has energized the Predators and the market in a way Weber, the anti-Subban in terms of personality, never did.

Much of the credit goes to Poile. He made it a priority to meet not only with Subban but also with his cadre of handlers so that everyone could formulate a common goal when it came to on- and off-ice objectives and the Predators could support him as much as possible. "We obviously heard a lot about things that happened in Montreal, some good, some maybe not so good," Poile said. "The whole idea was to get on the same page."

If the first year of the Subban era is any indication, things have worked out pretty well. He is, and always will be, a player who seeks and attracts attention. He received flak when he predicted the Predators would win Game 3 of the final, which they did. Subban claims he doesn't ask for microphones to be stuck in his face, but when they are, he's not going to be shy about expressing himself. In fact, he said he "gets into trouble with the league" if he says he doesn't want to talk. (Although he does have an annoying penchant for always saying, "at the end of the day," and "the reality is…" One time during the final he actually said, "At the end of the day, it's tomorrow, then it's the next day.") "I speak my mind," Subban said. "I speak the truth and at the end of the day, I'm going to speak what I feel."

WE OBVIOUSLY HEARD A LOT ABOUT THINGS THAT HAPPENED IN MONTREAL, SOME GOOD, SOME MAYBE NOT SO GOOD

– GM DAVID POILE ON P.K. SUBBAN

MATTHEWS vs.

Matthews and Laine burst onto the scene in their rookie season. Auston took the Calder Trophy, but who will be the better player in the long run?

BY TOM THOMPSON

A disillusioned American voter told a TV commentator that the 2016 election was like a choice between arsenic and strychnine. A comparison of Auston Matthews and Patrik Laine is the complete opposite. These two players are both Hall of Fame prospects, elite-level talents and cornerstones of future Stanley Cup contenders.

AUSTON MATTHEWS is the proverbial 200-foot center. He is strong offensively and defensively, difficult to play against and can make life miserable for opposing centers. In style, he's similar to Jonathan Toews but with more pace to his game. Matthews is a top-notch goal-scorer, playmaker and the prototypical first-line center that every team craves.

PATRIK LAINE has a chance to be one of the great goal-scorers of all-time, a pure sniper with a lethal shot. His ceiling can best be described as a 6-foot-5 version of Brett Hull or Mike Bossy. In the offensive zone, the Jets winger will often disappear from view, only to emerge in perfect scoring position, receive a pass and deliver a quick shot on net.

Which player is better? Let's break down their skill sets.

SKATING

One year ago, this was no contest. Matthews was already an above-average NHL skater – balanced, powerful and quick. Laine looked a bit like a young colt whose legs took a while to get moving. Matthews has continued to develop. All his skating lacks is that Connor McDavid type of breakaway speed. Laine has increased his leg strength and, when in full flight, his skating is more than adequate. Check out his rink-length dash in overtime in Nashville where Pekka Rinne stoned him. It's highlight-reel material. Like most players in the league, Laine's skating is not at Matthews' level, but as long as he keeps his big body in motion, it's fine.

EDGE: MATTHEWS

COMPETITIVENESS

Laine competes hard when he can sense a scoring opportunity. He'll go to dangerous areas in the offensive zone and take a hit in any zone in order to make a good play to a teammate. At other times, however, he "disappears" from the play. He doesn't hound the puck as a forechecker and can be passive in the defensive zone. His positioning is sound, but for portions of many shifts, he is not a factor in the play. Matthews wants to involve himself in the play every moment he is on the ice. His aim is to control the puck in all zones, and he will go to the puck if it isn't coming to him. He handles the puck in tight quarters where he has to absorb physical abuse to make plays. His defensive positioning is exceptional for a young player. His feet are always active and he works diligently for his team to regain possession of the puck. Matthews is a stronger, more powerful player in 1-on-1 confrontations.

LAINE

SHOT

Matthews is an above-average NHL shooter, especially his wrist shot in tight situations. His slapshot and wrist shot on the fly allow him to score from outside. Laine is already one of the best shooters in hockey. His one-timers from any position in the offensive zone are lethal. As a right-handed shot, he can move from right to left and shoot against the grain as well as any player in the NHL. His accuracy is uncanny.

EDGE: LAINE

VERSATILITY

In an era of parity, special teams can often determine the outcomes of games. Laine and Matthews are already elite power play performers. Both were excellent in 3-on-3 overtime and will be go-to players in shootouts. Matthews is definitely a more committed defensive player and thus is more likely to be used as a penalty killer someday soon.

EDGE: MATTHEWS

PUCK POSSESSION

This aspect of hockey, always crucial to winning games, has become more prominent in the public mind with the rise of analytics. The concept is simple – if my team possesses the puck, your team cannot score, and vice versa. When Laine has the puck, he makes good decisions to control it, pass it or get a dangerous shot on goal. But the reality is Matthews possesses the puck more than Laine. Matthews competes harder to get it, controls it for longer periods of time and his decisions with it are as good as Laine's.

PLAYMAKING

Laine is a pure goal-scorer. His priority is to find a quiet area in the offensive zone and make himself available to receive a pass for a quick shot. However, when he has possession of the puck, he makes elite-level decisions and can execute passes consistently. This applies whether he is at the point, in the offensive zone or making outlet passes from the defensive end. Matthews can make plays while under pressure and, with his soft hands, he doesn't need much space or time. On the rush, Matthews can execute forehand and backhand passes at top speed. Like Laine's, the execution is consistent.

EDGE: NEITHER

HOCKEY SENSE

In the current lingo, what is the hockey IQ of these players? Quick answer: they both have IQs that are at the top of the chart. Matthews and Laine can place themselves in the best scoring lanes and recognize how to get the puck to teammates who are positioned to score. Both players consistently make smart, crisp outlet passes from the defensive zone. Matthews' commitment to defensive play and his defensive positioning are more consistent, but few players in the NHL are better than Laine at lurking in the neutral zone to steal pucks or pick off errant passes.

DEFENSIVE PLAY

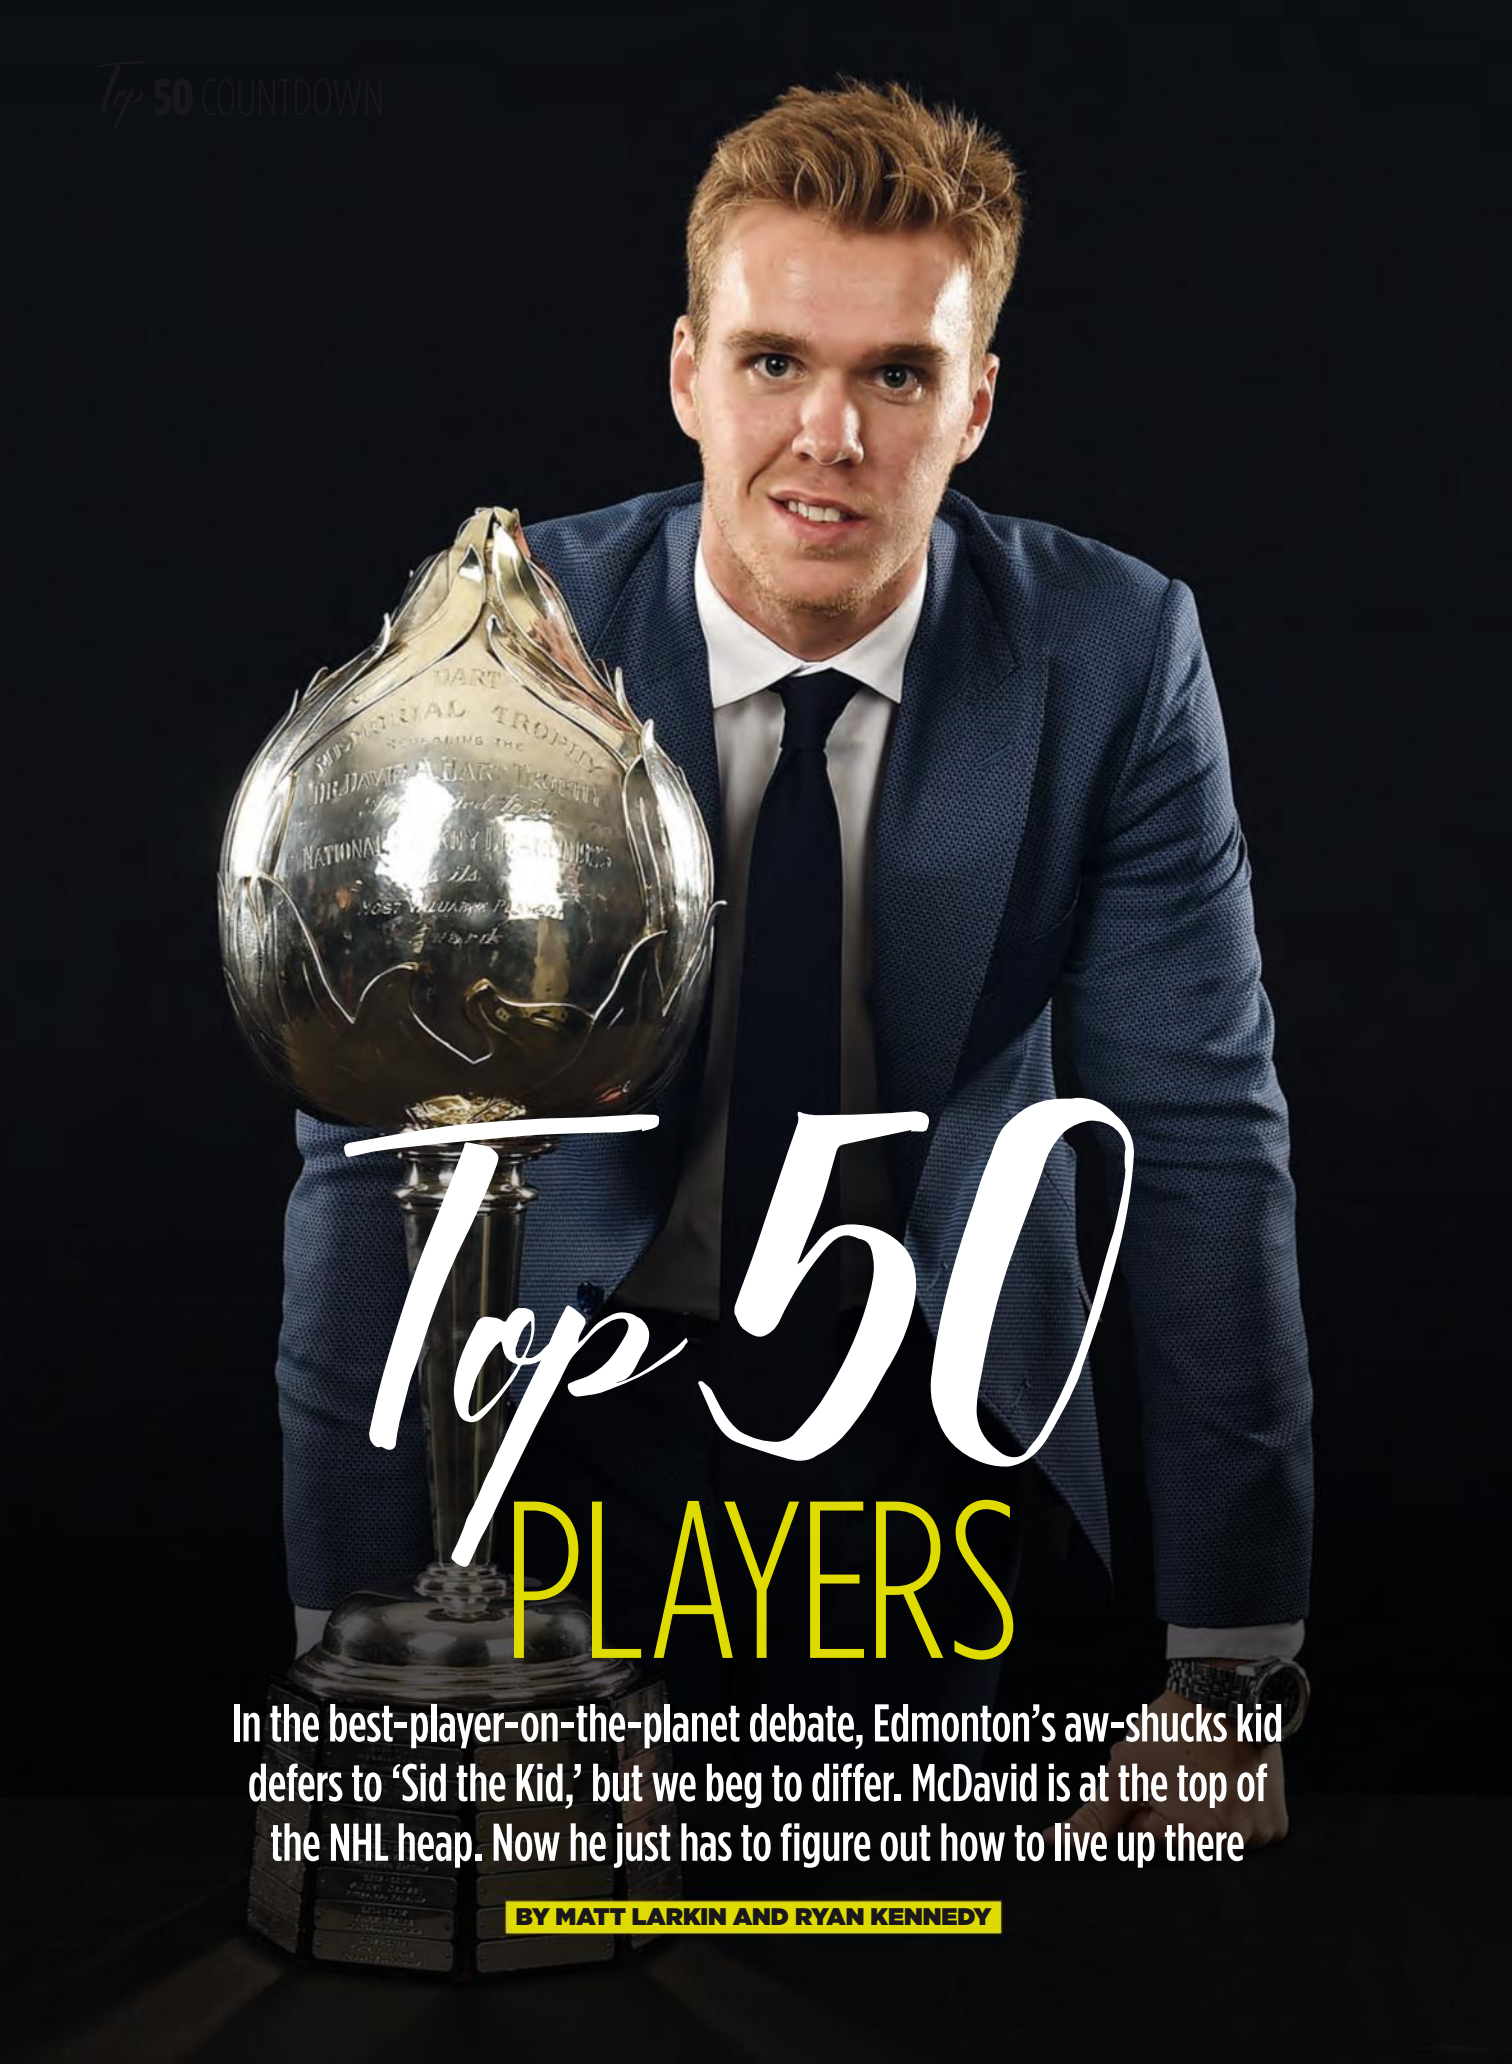
This one is no contest. I always believed Toews was the best young defensive center I had ever seen. Matthews is in the same league. His commitment to defensive play and positioning in all three zones is at a top-of-the-class level. Combined with his size and strength, this makes Matthews a formidable opponent for any first-line center in the NHL. Laine can intercept passes in the neutral zone and send the play the other way, and he's far from a lazy backchecker. However, his defensive positioning and overall commitment to team defense is average.

EDGE: MATTHEWS

CONCLUSION

This is definitely a choice between two different versions of valuable gems. Laine is a ruby whose luster shines every time he scores another big goal to help his team win. Matthews is a diamond whose brilliance and hardness are evident as he helps his team win in a number of ways. I would pay a lot for each gem and not surrender either of them under any circumstances. However, if I have to make a choice, I prefer diamonds to rubies. Auston Matthews over Patrik Laine. See you in 25 years at their inductions into the Hockey Hall of Fame.

Tom Thompson has been an NHL scout/director/assistant GM since 1985.



Top 50 PLAYERS

In the best-player-on-the-planet debate, Edmonton's aw-shucks kid defers to 'Sid the Kid,' but we beg to differ. McDavid is at the top of the NHL heap. Now he just has to figure out how to live up there

BY MATT LARKIN AND RYAN KENNEDY

WHEN I'M ALONE, MY MIND JUST GOES TO THINKING ABOUT HOCKEY. IT'S HARD TO GET AWAY FROM IT, BUT I'M NOT LOOKING TO GET AWAY FROM IT

– Connor McDavid

THE DOORS OF a luxury suite at the Encore hotel in Las Vegas swing open, and it's like walking through a portal to childhood. Flickering on a massive TV are the sights of EA Sports' NHL video game series. A young man in a ball cap sits in front of the screen, his back turned, engrossed in the action.

His handlers ask him to turn around and greet his company, just like parents might get their kid to put down the controller. "Stand up straight," they might say. "There's someone we want you to meet."

It's moments like this that are reminders of just how young Connor McDavid still is. At 20, he's old enough to have a Hart Trophy, an Art Ross Trophy and a Ted Lindsay Award shipped to his home in Newmarket, Ont., after securing all three at the NHL Awards. But he's not legal drinking or gambling age in the U.S. He's six months removed from being a teenager, so he should be mashing buttons on an Xbox controller with his friends all day. It's what most people his age do.

McDavid, of course, isn't most people his age. After just one-and-a-half-seasons in the NHL, he's already been anointed the best hockey player in the world by the Professional Hockey Writers' Association and the NHL Players' Association. So there's no such thing as a normal life anymore, not that it stops McDavid from trying to have one. "I don't want to be a guy who is on house arrest and doesn't go out anymore or anywhere," he said. "You can't be that guy. You also don't want to be bothered and hassled all the time. You've got to find that happy medium, and I think I've done a pretty good job of it."

He does so by seeking advice from a few people who have experienced what he is going through. Most commonly, that means talking to Wayne Gretzky and especially Bobby Orr, McDavid's agent. They help him find his normal, as do McDavid's friends. He loves playing the NHL video game series with them, so he does get some escape in those situations.

The truth, though, is McDavid fits the bill of most true sports icons: he lives and breathes and dreams the sport. It's not a coincidence that the likes of Gretzky or Tom Brady are famous for their obsession. "It's my life," McDavid said. "I wouldn't say it's a job, but it's my job. It's literally what I have to do, and I love doing it. So I do take the game home. I am thinking about it all the time. The only way you can really get away from it is when you're with other people and talking about random things with your buddies. Because when I'm alone, my mind just goes to thinking about hockey. It's hard to get away from it, but I'm not looking to get away from it."

NEW NO. 1
At 20 years old, McDavid takes over the mantle as the best player in the game, surpassing fellow superstar Crosby for top billing.

That mindset, naturally, invites comparisons to Sidney Crosby. He, too, is a generational talent, blessed with tremendous speed and skill. They're both No. 1 overall draft picks, and they share a level of superstardom no one else does in hockey today. Of course everyone will measure them against each other, and McDavid is more than fine with that. "I don't think you're ever sick of being compared to the best player in the league," he said. "That part is a dream come true. It's a guy I grew up idolizing and aspiring to be. When people mention me in the same breath as him, it's something I never get tired of hearing. Maybe how we're different is that he's a bigger body, not as tall, but he's wider. He plays that hardnosed game, which I try to do but maybe I don't do as well as Sid. That's something I can get better at."

McDavid is still growing into his personality. And what 20-year-old isn't? He's a bit guarded and shy, even in his posture. He speaks softly. He's slightly measured in his responses. But he also doesn't say nothing. He invites pressure and comparisons to all-time great NHL players, and he's a proud person. Even though 100 points wasn't a must-achieve goal for McDavid in 2016-17, he felt nervous at the end of the season once he realized the milestone was in reach. It was a pride thing. He may not project swagger, but the self-belief and big career aspirations live within him.

Even sitting in front of a TV playing video games, he can't hide his desire to succeed. That includes the honor of gracing the cover of his favorite childhood toy. It befits a young man who may still be shy in his body language but who refuses to shy away from greatness. He craves it. – MATT LARKIN

EDMONTON OILERS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 9

By the slimmest of margins, McDavid takes the crown from Sidney Crosby. Why? Because the Oilers' boy-king has yet to play his best hockey – and what we've seen already has been outstanding. Expect an even higher level of elite skill and speed from McDavid in Year 3 of the Edmonton resurrection. A Stanley Cup is possible.

02 SIDNEY CROSBY

PITTSBURGH PENGUINS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 1

There's no shame in getting edged out by a rising McDavid. If Crosby needs to, he can just cuddle up to his latest Stanley Cup. Speaking of which, if you still don't believe Crosby is one of the best of all-time and climbing, just roll back the tape on the final against Nashville, when he imposed his will and earned a second straight Conn Smythe Trophy.

03 ERIK KARLSSON

OTTAWA SENATORS | POSITION D | LAST YEAR 8

Karlsson didn't just lead the Senators to a shocking berth in the Eastern Conference final, the underdogs nearly won the series. Even in defeat, Karlsson's efforts were the culmination of a season where he hit a rarely seen level of excellence. His ability to control a game through his skating and puck movement is unparalleled.

04 PATRICK KANE

CHICAGO BLACKHAWKS | POSITION RW | LAST YEAR 2

Chicago has always needed Kane to produce, but this season the Hawks are really going to lean on him due to personnel losses. One of the most dazzling offensive players in the world, Kane has continued to pour in points and redefine how big a superstar needs to be. His former running mate, Artemi Panarin, is gone, but with Brandon Saad back in the fold, we're betting the Blackhawks will be just fine. And Kane will still get his.

05 CAREY PRICE

MONTREAL CANADIENS | POSITION G | LAST YEAR 3

He didn't win the Vezina Trophy, and he didn't have the best stats in the league, but Price is still the most intimidating goaltending presence in the game. That's funny, given how calm he is both on and off the ice, but that's part of the death in facing him – Price will not be rattled. With Montreal's defense corps getting slower over the summer, the Canadiens will need their ace at his best, and we think he'll deliver.

06 SERGEI BOBROVSKY

COLUMBUS BLUE JACKETS | POSITION G | LAST YEAR NR

'Officer Bob' made a conditioning change in the summer of 2016 and reverted back to Vezina Trophy form, propelling Columbus back into the playoffs in the process. So is it safe to say the real Bobrovsky has stood up? Absolutely. With his newfound outlook, he's discovered the key to his own greatness.

07 EVGENI MALKIN

PITTSBURGH PENGUINS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 18

A surefire Hall of Famer already and the biggest snub on the NHL's top 100 players of all-time list, Malkin can take comfort in another Stanley Cup ring and the outsized role he played in securing the chalice for Pittsburgh. His combination of size and skill makes him a potent foe, and it's crazy to think how many years he still has left in the tank.

08 AUSTON MATTHEWS

TORONTO MAPLE LEAFS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR NR

Much like McDavid last year, Matthews finds himself in the top 10 with room to climb as a sophomore. Will there be a slump? Considering he got better as last season went on, that seems unlikely. With incredible creativity and shot selection, Matthews will continue to bewilder goaltenders and his supporting cast in Toronto will grow alongside him.

09 VICTOR HEDMAN

TAMPA BAY LIGHTNING | POSITION D | LAST YEAR 16

Hedman put up big numbers last year, despite the fact Tampa Bay was a triage unit and his defense partner was an AHL call-up for long stretches. Imagine what the smooth-skating giant will do now that the Lightning is back up to speed. Hedman doesn't have a Norris Trophy, but he's due for one.

10 BRENT BURNS

SAN JOSE SHARKS | POSITION D | LAST YEAR 14

Everybody's favorite wookiee landed his first Norris last season. He's a freak thanks to his size, shot and skills, and on a talented San Jose team he's in the perfect situation to thrive. That being said, the Sharks are getting older and Burns will have to up his game in response. The fact we don't doubt he will speaks volumes about his abilities.

PRICE: MINAS PANAGIOTAKIS/GETTY IMAGES; BOBROVSKY: JONATHAN KOZUB/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

BOSTON BRUINS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 12

Though points were hard to come by in the early going last season, Bergeron was still the dominant two-way force we've come to expect. Few players can tilt the ice in terms of possession the way he does, and if the Bruins have any chance of keeping up in the Atlantic Division, it will be thanks to his heroics on the top line.

12 JONATHAN TOEWS

CHICAGO BLACKHAWKS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 5

Like Bergeron, Toews didn't get off to an excellent start offensively last year, but he still ended up with respectable numbers and boasts a tremendous two-way game. Getting old running mate Saad back will help, not to mention buddy Patrick Sharp. The Hawks need to hit reset and 'Captain Serious' is just the man to press the button.

13 BRADEN HOLTBY

WASHINGTON CAPITALS | POSITION G | LAST YEAR 17

The 'HoltBeast' has entrenched himself amidst the NHL's elite goaltenders in recent years, and though his post-season wasn't electrifying, he was hardly the only one to blame for the Caps' playoff exit. Holtby possesses a combination of physical gifts and technical ability that allows him to rack up wins.

14 NIKITA KUCHEROV

TAMPA BAY LIGHTNING | POSITION RW | LAST YEAR 33

Kucherov, perhaps the quietest star in the NHL right now, lets the scoresheet do the talking for him. A top-five producer already, the devilishly effective right winger makes magic with the puck and can kill you on the power play. With the Lightning getting healthy, he'll get more cover from teammates – and that's bad for everyone else.

15 MARK SCHEIFELE

WINNIPEG JETS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR NR

He had previously proven himself to be a bona fide No. 1 center, but Scheifele's offensive output last year served notice. A top-10 scorer for the first time in his young career, Scheifele is now entering his prime. The fact he'll be doing it with Patrik Laine on his wing should scare everyone outside of Winnipeg.

16 NICKLAS BACKSTROM

WASHINGTON CAPITALS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 34

Don't call him the sidekick; it's not cute and it's not accurate. Backstrom has proven himself to be Washington's most dangerous offensive player these days thanks to his vision with the puck and his ability to dish it off at the perfect time. He's unflappable on the ice and for a Caps team that can get skittish, that's a good trait.

17 JOHN TAVARES

NEW YORK ISLANDERS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 15

Though his point totals have steadily dropped over the past few years, Tavares is also a fantastic two-way player and possession driver. The real intrigue in Brooklyn (OK, the on-ice intrigue) is that Jordan Eberle has come to town as a running mate for Tavares, who already has an iconic moment with the winger dating back to the 2009 world juniors.

18 VLADIMIR TARASENKO

ST. LOUIS BLUES | POSITION RW | LAST YEAR 20

The Blues are going through a big roster shift right now, but as long as Tarasenko is in the lineup, things won't go too poorly. He is perhaps the NHL's premier scoring threat: only Alex Ovechkin has more goals over the past three seasons, and Tarasenko is just entering his prime.

19 JOHNNY GAUDREAU

CALGARY FLAMES | POSITION LW | LAST YEAR 19

Undoubtedly one of the most skilled and slippery players in the NHL, Gaudreau was felled by slashing opponents last season, bringing that epidemic to the forefront of league worries. Calgary is a lot better on paper this year, so if 'Johnny Hockey' can come in from the periphery to throw off defenses, expect more offense than ever.

20 TYLER SEGUIN

DALLAS STARS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 13

His team got caved in because of injuries and goaltending woes last year, but Seguin is still one of the top offensive centers in the league. Now, he's got a new toy to play with (Alexander Radulov) and still a ton of chemistry with Jamie Benn. With more help, Seguin can steer the Stars back into the post-season.

21 JAMIE BENN

DALLAS STARS | POSITION LW | LAST YEAR 4

Like his buddy Seguin, Benn was dragged down last year by the disappointing cast around him. Sure, he'll need to play better himself in order to get Dallas back on track, but we believe that's a certainty. The power forward is one of the NHL's biggest threats off the wing and the key piece of Dallas' attack.

BRUCE BENNETT/GETTY IMAGES

22 RYAN SUTER

MINNESOTA WILD | POSITION D | LAST YEAR 43

Opponents would probably prefer Suter to act his age, but the 32-year-old is still piling up the minutes on Minnesota's blueline. Not only that, but the slick-skater doesn't seem to be slowing down. His Wild have a chance to do something special, and Suter will be key, especially with Marco Scandella off to Buffalo.

23 BRAD MARCHAND

BOSTON BRUINS | POSITION LW | LAST YEAR 45

Hate him if you must, but acknowledge that Marchand has become one of the most lethal players in the game. His offensive prowess is at an all-time high, and the pest remains one of the best penalty killers. He showed at the World Cup he could hang with Crosby, so maybe Marchand can quit it with the cheap shots.

24 PATRIK LAINE

WINNIPEG JETS | POSITION RW | LAST YEAR NR

He came into the league with high expectations and still managed to smash them. Laine is already one of the most feared snipers in the NHL thanks to his heavy shot and creativity with the puck. Now the mission is to round out his game and keep growing. Helping the Jets get back into the playoffs wouldn't hurt, either.

25 JACK EICHEL

BUFFALO SABRES | POSITION C | LAST YEAR NR

Eichel possesses the key to a city's hope. The phenom missed a big chunk of the first half last season, but he struck back with a vengeance upon his return (see pg. 32).

29 P.K. SUBBAN

NASHVILLE PREDATORS | POSITION D | LAST YEAR 36

He matched up against some of the best forwards around in the playoffs and had great success. Subban is a possession demon with a minty-fresh game.

30 MATT MURRAY

PITTSBURGH PENGUINS | POSITION G | LAST YEAR NR

It's going to be a shock for Murray when one of his NHL campaigns ends without him hoisting the Stanley Cup. But with his size and poise, when will that be?

31 DREW DOUGHTY

LOS ANGELES KINGS | POSITION D | LAST YEAR 6

The Kings are slowing down, but they still have a swashbuckler on the back end in Doughty. The natural talent plays huge minutes and drives possession.

32 DUNCAN KEITH

CHICAGO BLACKHAWKS | POSITION D | LAST YEAR 27

The future Hall of Famer does it all and logs a ton of ice time. But with Chicago's blueline taking sizeable hits, he'll have to do more with less as he gets older.

33 JOE PAVELSKI

SAN JOSE SHARKS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 10

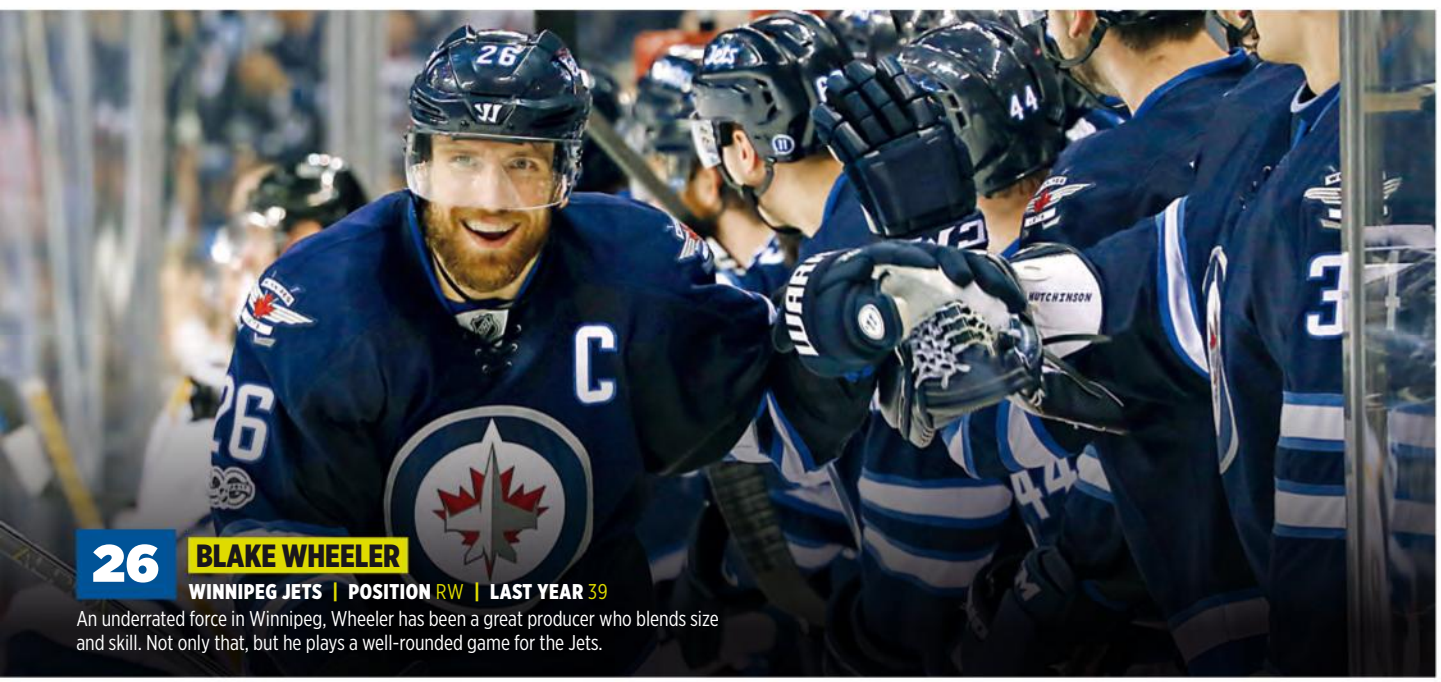
A two-way force on the ice and a team leader in the dressing room, San Jose's captain will have to continue his fine play if the Sharks are going to keep up in the Pacific.



26 BLAKE WHEELER

WINNIPEG JETS | POSITION RW | LAST YEAR 39

An underrated force in Winnipeg, Wheeler has been a great producer who blends size and skill. Not only that, but he plays a well-rounded game for the Jets.

27 RYAN GETZLAF

ANAHEIM DUCKS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 21

No two ways about it: Getzlaf was an absolute beast last season. How many good years does he have left? Hard to say. But stay out of his way until it's completely obvious.

28 LEON DRAISAITL

EDMONTON OILERS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR NR

Don't call him a result of Connor McDavid. The powerful Draisaitl did plenty of damage by himself last year. Just ask Anaheim after he hung five points on them in a playoff game.

34 KEVIN SHATTENKIRK

NEW YORK RANGERS | POSITION D | LAST YEAR NR

The biggest free agent of the summer, Shattenkirk even gave his hometown Rangers a discount. In exchange, New York gets an elite puck-mover in his prime.

35 RYAN MCDONAGH

NEW YORK RANGERS | POSITION D | LAST YEAR 50

Getting an elite, right-handed 'D' partner in Shattenkirk is going to unlock McDonagh in New York, where he was already the Rangers' premier defenseman.

DARCY FINLEY/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

36 ALEX OVECHKIN

WASHINGTON CAPITALS | POSITION LW | LAST YEAR 11

The scrutiny will be searing this year, as 'Ovie' tries to prove he's not a fallen star. Playoff failings aside, he's still got one of the most devastating shots in the world.

37 DAVID PASTRNAK

BOSTON BRUINS | POSITION RW | LAST YEAR NR

Pastrnak jumped into the stratosphere last season with a 34-goal campaign, more than doubling his previous high. At 21 years old, he has more big seasons coming.

38 ALEKSANDER BARKOV

FLORIDA PANTHERS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 48

A healthy Barkov would be awesome to witness, because we haven't see a full 82-game season from him yet. But when he's out there, he's a big, talented force up the middle.

39 DOUGIE HAMILTON

CALGARY FLAMES | POSITION D | LAST YEAR NR

Size, possession and a two-way game all line up for Hamilton, who's just 24 and still on the ascent. Mark Giordano gets an assist on his partner's ranking for helping him to thrive.

40 MIKAEL GRANLUND

MINNESOTA WILD | POSITION RW | LAST YEAR NR

Playing with Finnish elder Mikko Koivu, Granlund hit new heights by leading the Wild in scoring. The talented playmaker has officially lived up to the hype.

41 MAX PACIORETTY

MONTREAL CANADIENS | POSITION LW | LAST YEAR NR

Playing with reckless abandon hasn't done wonders for Pacioretty's health, but the Canadiens captain leads without fear, and few can score like him these days.

42 ARTEMI PANARIN

COLUMBUS BLUE JACKETS | POSITION LW | LAST YEAR 44

Panarin's a talented sniper who really established himself quickly in the NHL. He comes to Columbus at a heavy cost (Saad), but they needed his skill up front.

43 MARC-EDOUARD VLASIC

SAN JOSE SHARKS | POSITION D | LAST YEAR NR

A lot of teams surely despaired when Vlasic signed a long-term extension with San Jose this summer. Simply put, he's the best shutdown defenseman in the world.

44 EVGENY KUZNETSOV

WASHINGTON CAPITALS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 30

Even with all of Washington's talent, Kuznetsov stands out for his sublime skill level and drive. He's a top-line center on almost any other NHL franchise.

45 ROMAN JOSI

NASHVILLE PREDATORS | POSITION D | LAST YEAR 37

Nashville's run to the Cup final gave the hockey world a look at what Preds fans already knew: Josi is one of the best two-way defenseman on the rise in the game today.

46 STEVEN STAMKOS

TAMPA BAY LIGHTNING | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 22

Major injuries have sidetracked Stamkos' career, but hopefully that's in the past. Can he return to his Rocket Richard Trophy ways? That's the big question.

47 LOGAN COUTURE

SAN JOSE SHARKS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 23

Like Stamkos, Couture has been walloped by the injury bug. But when he's on the ice, the Sharks pivot is a two-way king and will be key to the team's offense.

48 MARK STONE

OTTAWA SENATORS | POSITION RW | LAST YEAR NR

Stone is an absolute possession monster for the Senators and has become one of the most effective two-way players in the game. His skating is much improved.

49 CLAUDE GIROUX

PHILADELPHIA FLYERS | POSITION C | LAST YEAR 35

He's the captain and two-way heart of the Flyers, but Giroux has been trending down offensively. Can the team around him get better in time to make something happen?

50 KRIS LETANG

PITTSBURGH PENGUINS | POSITION D | LAST YEAR 24

Yeah, yeah, the Penguins won a Cup without him, but imagine how much easier the playoffs would have been for Pittsburgh with Letang's effortless skating in the lineup.

SID THE MAN REFLECTS ON SID THE KID

As he turns 30, Crosby gives thanks for strict parents and compassionate coaches

BY SHELLY ANDERSON

THE COACH REPRESENTS AUTHORITY. YOU MIGHT NOT ALWAYS AGREE WITH WHAT HE SAYS, BUT YOU HAVE TO RESPECT IT.

-Sidney Crosby

SIDNEY CROSBY'S CAREER has featured its share of uncertainty. Could he return to form after his concussions? Could he win that elusive second – and then third – Stanley Cup to cement his place as one of the all-time greats? While he has answered both of those questions, what was never in question was the huge role his parents played in his success. They made sure he got to games and practices and had what he needed to hone his skills.

Chauffeur and equipment manager weren't the only important roles Troy and Trina Crosby played, and his parents weren't Crosby's only influences. He recently opened up about the life lessons that shaped him long before he was captain of the Pittsburgh Penguins, notched any of his 1,027 NHL points and was a two-time Hart Trophy and Conn Smythe Trophy winner.

The face of the NHL isn't 'Sid the Kid' anymore. He turned 30 in August and can grow at least some semblance of a playoff beard now, but the boy from Cole Harbour, N.S., still resides in his soul. "As a kid, I just loved being out there and competing," he said. "There's so much you can take away from the game."

Adapting to different coaches as he zoomed up the levels of youth hockey has helped Crosby in the NHL. The Penguins have had five coaches in his 12 seasons – Ed Olczyk, Michel Therrien, Dan Bylsma, Mike Johnston and current bench boss Mike Sullivan, and three times Crosby has seen a new coach come in mid-season. Every one of them arrived with a different coaching style, but they all had the same role. "The coach represents authority," Crosby said. "You might not always agree with what he says, but you have to respect it. As you get older, you understand more. Now, if you have an issue with the coach, it's something you have to bring up."

Crosby credits the coaches he had growing up with teaching him how to handle a variety of situations. Perhaps the biggest was putting losses in perspective. "I remember some of the messages we got from our coach, and it wasn't, 'Hey, this was a waste of time,' and he wasn't mad. It was, 'Hey, this is what we have to work on.' Some kids were crying. I was probably crying. You lose, but you have to go through that. You have to learn that you're not going to win everything all the time."

Since he was a kid, Crosby has always been in the spotlight. He was pegged as a star while getting visits from the tooth fairy – he did his first media interview at seven years old – but he always sought to just be one of the guys. That meant doing grunt work like everyone else, whether it was fundraising or training.

Through it all, Troy and Trina were there providing what Crosby considers a strong mix of patience, parameters and parental advice. There was Trina's well-documented tolerance for the dryer Crosby beat up with errant pucks during his hours upon hours shooting at a net in the family basement. (For those still keeping faith in the myth that he intentionally shot pucks into the dryer, sorry to burst your bubble.) And lines were clearly drawn. "They were pretty strict," Crosby said. "Looking back, I'm glad they were that way. The biggest thing was it was consistent. Like any kid, you have a bunch of hockey, and you've got homework, too, and you're thinking, 'Mom, can you write me a note because I had three games this weekend?' It was, 'Hey, let's be honest here, you're not playing next weekend if you're not doing your homework.' Everything was prioritized that way."

Troy's message was straightforward, linking hockey with life, and Crosby took it to heart. At 30 years old, he remains the best player in the game, and he's also widely recognized as the NHL's hardest-working superstar. "The thing that he wanted me to take away from it was, and I remember he told me this all the time, 'Whatever you do when you grow up, make sure you're doing it to your best. You work hard every day, whatever it is,' " Crosby said. "That's all he asked as a parent, and that's more than fair." H

FIRST STEP TOWARDS SUPER STARDOM

Eichel's never-stop-improving attitude should have Sabres fans salivating over his (literal) rapid acceleration to greatness

BY RYAN KENNEDY

JACK EICHEL HAD a lot of time on his hands. Sidelined by an ankle injury for the first quarter of last season, there was only so much rehab the Buffalo Sabres center could do. So with some free time to spare, he decided to get a new hairstyle. In what can only be described as an awesome tribute to late 1980s hip-hop, Eichel got a fresh look from his barber: big on top, shaved on the sides. "I gave him free reign," Eichel said. "We have a tight relationship and I told him to do whatever he wanted. I liked it. I ran with it."

When he returned to the ice, his game matched his fade. Eichel went full beast mode, averaging 0.93 points per game, 11th-best league wide.

And there's very good reason to believe Eichel will be even better in 2017-18. Training with Kyle Czech, Boston University hockey's strength and conditioning coach, Eichel was on a mission to take his already elite game and pump it up a notch. "I've worked with a lot of athletes, and he's different," Czech said. "When you're training Eichel, he's always locked in. He's extremely technical, and he always wants to know why he's doing something."

Czech relates all his routines to hockey, targeting muscle groups and firing patterns to optimize results. This summer's focus was on Eichel's first stride and acceleration, and to get there, loaded sprints were on the menu. For a hockey player, running on its own doesn't offer much. But if you put on a harness and pull a weighted sled as you run – a loaded sprint – then your chest comes down and your shins are at a different angle. It utilizes different muscle groups, more quads and glutes, and makes more sense for players looking to work on their skating. In the case of the loaded sprints, it's all about hockey-applicable exercises.

Eichel's skating was already great when he was burning college opponents in his Terriers jersey. He already had a long stride. Now it was just a matter of getting more explosive from a static start. "With an athlete like Jack, the smallest changes make the biggest difference," Czech said. "He's really good at picking up minor details."

Which is great news for the Sabres, who are still tailing behind in the Atlantic Division despite employing Eichel and two-way star Ryan O'Reilly. But finding players like that is actually the hard part. "This is a league that thrives on centermen," said new GM Jason Botterill. "The fortunate thing here is we have a couple amazing high-end centermen."

Despite Eichel's brilliance last season, the Sabres missed the playoffs by a wide berth for the sixth year in a row. Discord was a consistent theme, and the firing of coach Dan Bylsma and GM Tim Murray came at an awkward time, as unsubstantiated rumors about Eichel's relationship with Bylsma had been tossed into the public's ear. For his part, Eichel said he's more than happy to be in Buffalo and wants to take on even more responsibility. "As someone who wants to be in that leadership role and wants that pressure and wants to be in the Sabres organization, I feel like we just need to put it all together," Eichel said.

And while Botterill doesn't want to put a timeline on how long it would take for the Sabres to contend for a Stanley Cup, it's fair to say the fans are hoping for at least a playoff berth soon. Bolstering the blueline with the additions of Marco Scandella and Nathan Beaulieu will help, though the most galling thing for Sabres fans is that they are now playing catch-up with the hated Toronto Maple Leafs and Auston Matthews.

The 20-year-old Eichel, who will continue to be mentioned alongside his draft mate Connor McDavid and his Team USA buddy/NHL rival Matthews, doesn't shy away from the challenge of meeting his peers' early triumphs. "As a competitive guy, you want to succeed," he said. "It makes you want to push harder. And with players like Auston and Connor, you can see the league is going in the right direction."

Let's not sell Eichel short in this conversation, either. If Buffalo is going to emerge from the mire, he will be leading the offensive charge. Top-line centers with his combination of size, speed and skill are crucial to any respectable rebuild, and they cannot be discounted. "Jack is an amazing player," Botterill said. "What's exciting for me is the drive that he has. You look at his track record in college and even the simple thing of playing at the world championship this year. Here's a player who wants to be playing in April and May. Those are the players we want in our organization."

JACK BE NIMBLE
Eichel is a devoted student in the gym who constantly asks about the purpose of each exercise. The goal of his workouts this summer: to develop a more explosive first stride.

Eichel would also like to see his squad come through in the clutch more often next season. "As a group, we were a bit inconsistent," he said. "We'd need to win a couple in a row, and it seemed like we couldn't put that together this year. You lose one you thought you should have won, or lose a lead, or give up two points for one...that was the tale of our year."

Now it's time for the Sabres to step up, and a healthy Eichel will make a world of difference. "He kind of has an extra sense," Czech said. "He knows, down to a science, what his body needs."

Sometimes it's a bunch of anaerobic exercises and static starts. Sometimes it's a fresh new haircut. In the end, the result is the same: Eichel looking good.

CANADA CUP?

Next spring, it'll be a quarter-century since Stanley lived north of the 49th parallel. Could he be coming home in 2018?

BY MATT LARKIN

NO CANADIAN TEAM made the playoffs in 2015-16, and they ended up with five of the top six draft picks, with the Toronto Maple Leafs winning the Auston Matthews Bowl at No. 1.

Just one year later, five Canadian clubs qualified for the post-season, including the Ottawa Senators, who came within a double-overtime goal of eliminating the eventual Stanley Cup-champion Pittsburgh Penguins. Most Canadian squads suddenly feature some of the sport's most elite young talents, and we must seriously consider that the Stanley Cup will cross the U.S. border for the first time since 1993. Who, then, is Canada's best hope to snatch hockey's Holy Grail next? We present all seven teams, ranked in order of their Cup chances.

1. EDMONTON OILERS

Sidney Crosby and Evgeni Malkin. Patrick Kane and Jonathan Toews. Next on the horizon: Connor McDavid and Leon Draisaitl. The Penguins and Chicago Blackhawks have won six of the 12 Stanley Cups in the NHL's salary cap era, including four of the past five, and they've done so with top-heavy roster models. They pay their superstars the megabucks and repeatedly replace support players who price themselves out of the market.

The Oilers inked McDavid to an eight-year extension with a $12.5-million annual cap hit, and will surely get Draisaitl's name on a big-money, eight-year pact soon. GM Peter Chiarelli, who won a Cup with Boston in 2011, knows what he's doing. Dealing Jordan Eberle, who carries a $6-million price tag, for younger, cheaper underachiever Ryan Strome was a Stan Bowman-esque move. The Oilers understand McDavid and Draisaitl are so talented they make others around them better (hulking tough guy Patrick Maroon is now a 27-goal scorer, for example). So the Oil have no problem pouring disproportionate dollars into a pair of franchise pillars.

The recent Cup teams from Chicago and Pittsburgh boasted outstanding goaltending to support their stars up front in Corey Crawford and Matt Murray, and the Oilers have discovered that, too. Cam Talbot led the NHL in games, saves, shots faced and minutes in 2016-17, creating a large sample size to evaluate him, and he broke out for a career season. His advanced metrics graded him out as an elite netminder, and he finished fourth in Vezina Trophy voting.

ANY TEAM I CAN THINK OF HAS TO LOSE BEFORE THEY CAN WIN. WE DID THAT. IT'S TIME TO LEARN FROM THAT AND MAKE A REAL PUSH – CONNOR McDAVID

On the back end, Chicago had Duncan Keith as a horse for their titles, while the Penguins had Kris Letang for at least their 2009 and 2016 runs. The Oilers made tremendous strides on defense last year, too. Oscar Klefbom and Adam Larsson emerged as a legitimate top pair to build around, and Darnell Nurse improved noticeably. Factor in the size Edmonton boasts up front with Maroon, Milan Lucic and Zack Kassian on the wings, and this is a balanced team. McDavid impacts the game as much as anyone in the NHL, but what makes the Oil especially dangerous is they actually aren't a one-man army, and they'll only get deeper if prospect Jesse Puljujarvi blossoms after a forgettable rookie year. Draisaitl once pulled off the same trick.

Kane and Toews hoisted the Cup in their third NHL seasons, while Crosby and Malkin did it in their fourth and third campaigns, respectively. The Oilers got to within one win of the Western Conference final in McDavid's sophomore year, so a championship is legitimately in reach. "Can I say we're at the front of the pack? No, because we didn't win," McDavid said. "Do we have a good chance at being a good team? I think we do. That experience this past year was crucial. Any team I can think of has to lose before they can win. We did that. It's time to learn from that and make a real push."

2. TORONTO MAPLE LEAFS

ESPN conducts an annual franchise rankings poll in which fans rate every MLB, NBA, NFL and NHL team in categories such as coaching, players, affordability and stadium experience, producing an aggregate Ultimate Standings of 122 franchises. The Leafs, remarkably, finished last three years in a row. They broke that streak in 2016-17 and shouldn't land anywhere near the bottom for the next decade.

Since Brendan Shanahan took over as team president, he has systematically gutted the franchise's culture and remade every detail. The Leafs have new uniforms. They just hosted their first outdoor game. Enough with the silly "honoring" of numbers, Shanahan figured – so the Leafs finally retired numbers last fall. Heck, they even hired a new anthem singer. And, most of all, they have completely transformed their hockey decision-making personnel, from GM Lou Lamoriello to coach Mike Babcock to assistant GM Mark Hunter.

The Leafs struck gold on the ice with the raw talent of their kids last season, as Auston Matthews, William Nylander and Mitch Marner became the first trio of rookie teammates in 36 years and the second in league history to eclipse 60 points apiece, joining the 1980-81 Quebec Nordiques' Peter Stastny, Anton Stastny and Dale Hunter. But freshman Connor Brown sniped 20 goals for the Leafs, too, and KHL import defenseman Nikita Zaitsev parachuted right into big-time NHL minutes. Nazem Kadri remade himself as an agitating shutdown center who happened to score 32 goals. Everything the team touched seemed to bloom, not just the big-ticket prospects. The common thread: the Leafs boast some of the most exciting young talent in the game, but they also host an ecosystem that helps this group thrive. Toronto was well above average in score-, venue- and zone-adjusted Corsi in 2016-17 and finished with the NHL's No. 2 power play and No. 10 penalty kill. The coaching staff deserves some credit for that.

The Leafs, then, have a lethal combination of a skilled, deep forward group and a vastly improved network of puppet masters shaping their identity. The synergy between the two put the team ahead of schedule, into the playoffs at least a year earlier than expected. Given how well goaltender Frederik Andersen settled into his job after a slow start and how many games Toronto gave away last season blowing late leads, there's actually room for this team to rise into the 100-point stratosphere right away. "We also were done in Round 1," Babcock cautioned. "The way we look at it, that's too early. We want to continue to play in the spring a lot longer than we did last year. But you've got to get in the spring, and you can see good teams miss the playoffs now. So that's our first challenge."

NEW LEAFS
Led by Marner and a cast of kids, Toronto pushed fast-forward on its rebuild and is looking to contend.

Toronto still plays leaky defensive hockey and needs another top-four blueliner, but its farm system is loaded enough that Lamoriello can now adopt a buyer mentality and seek help via trade. The Leafs are set up to contend for years, and they may take an aggressive shot at winning a Stanley Cup now with Matthews and Marner two years away from their second contracts. The Patrick Marleau signing suggests as much.

3. CALGARY FLAMES

Calgary lacks a McDavid or Matthews, a true superstar that can vie for the Hart Trophy every year. But the Flames hold some advantages of their own.

If the Nashville Predators own the NHL's best defense corps, Calgary comes a close second. It already boasted Mark Giordano, Dougie Hamilton and T.J. Brodie before solidifying an enviable top-four by trading for Travis Hamonic in June. The Flames blueline is built to contend now, and it has reinforcements coming down the pipeline in Rasmus Andersson, Oliver Kylington, Adam Fox and Juuso Valimaki, none of whom have to be rushed given the team's depth at the NHL level.

The Flames boast one of the NHL's top two-way lines in Mikael Backlund, Matthew Tkachuk and Michael Frolik, and get a lot of their scoring from the talented tandem of Johnny Gaudreau and Sean Monahan. What holds Calgary back from elite Cup contender status, for now, is a lack of depth up front. The Flames' forward group thins out considerably outside the top-six, and they haven't found a right winger who can keep up with Monahan and Gaudreau. Troy Brouwer flopped last year.

What the Flames really need, if they're going to match strides with Edmonton and Toronto, is for Sam Bennett to realize his potential. He was drafted fourth overall in 2014, one pick after Draisaitl and four picks before Nylander, but Bennett has struggled to establish himself as a complete NHLer. He's hardly out of time at 21, though, so if he can deliver on the promise that earned him Doug Gilmour comparisons while playing for OHL Kingston, the Flames will challenge for the Stanley Cup. Late bloomer Mark Jankowski is another X-factor to watch in the coming years.

FIRE STARTER
Gaudreau sparks the offense in Calgary, but the Flames' hottest commodity is their blueline.

And let's not forget about Mike Smith. He joins a contender after rotting in Arizona for years, and he's the NHL's best puckhandling goaltender. He can elevate Calgary to juggernaut status as early as this season if he still has enough good hockey left in him at 35. "Every season, you have high hopes as a team, and bringing in a goaltender of that caliber is pretty exciting," Gaudreau said. "It gets your team excited. I'm just looking forward to 3-on-3 with him, which will play like it's 4-on-3 hockey."

4. MONTREAL CANADIENS

The Bleu, Blanc et Rouge are as close as any Canadian team to a Cup – or the furthest away of all seven. It's a matter of perspective.

The optimistic viewpoint: the Habs are fresh off their second first-place finish in the Atlantic Division in three years. In Carey Price, they own the netminder everybody would pick from the NHL's current pool if asked to win one game, and they've extended his contract through 2025-26. They have a Clydesdale No. 1 blueliner and tremendous leader in Shea Weber, backed up by newly signed shutdown D-man Karl Alzner and stalwart Jeff Petry. In Max Pacioretty, they have a player with more goals the past four seasons than everyone except Alex Ovechkin, Joe Pavelski and Sidney Crosby. They just traded for a dynamic young offensive force in Jonathan Drouin, giving them their first legit Francophone star since Jose Theodore, assuming Drouin can handle the exponential leap in pressure. "It all depends on the individual," Price said. "Some people thrive on it. Others don't. I don't know him at all. He seems to be one of those impact players who like being put in those types of situations. So I'm sure he's excited to be close to home."

THERE ARE A LOT OF GREAT TEAMS IN THE NHL THAT ARE IN CANADA. IT ALWAYS JUST SEEMS LIKE IN THE PLAYOFFS IT'S JUST GETTING HOT AT THE RIGHT TIME – CAREY PRICE

The pessimistic viewpoint: the Habs lack a true No. 1 center, especially if coach Claude Julien won't give Alex Galchenyuk an extended look in that role. They acquired Drouin, but they lost Alexander Radulov in free agency, nullifying the gain. Weber turns 32 in August. Alzner's advanced statistics suggest he's not the top-end defensive defenseman he's reputed to be. Montreal mortgaged its best prospect, blueliner Mikhail Sergachev, to get Drouin, and the franchise has nothing close to a 10-bell future star waiting in the system.

It's thus possible this edition of the Canadiens is as good as it's going to get. At times, the Habs look unbeatable, especially in October when they've compiled a 26-4-2 record the past three seasons. "There are a lot of great teams in the NHL that are in Canada," Price said. "It always just seems like in the playoffs it's just getting hot at the right time. You look at our history…we're a very streaky team. All we've got to do is just get on that hot streak at the right time."

But GM Marc Bergevin has a veteran-laden group, most of which is likely to decline, not improve. Unless he finds a way to acquire some star-quality upgrades in seasons to come, his team has peaked. And if that's true, the Habs are at the top of the roller-coaster, about to start a long, steep descent.

5. OTTAWA SENATORS

No Canadian team confounds more than plucky Ottawa, which bucked a trend by coming within one goal of the 2017 Stanley Cup final despite weak advanced statistics. "We knew we were a good team, but you have to earn your respect," said star defenseman Erik Karlsson. "This year we did a good job in earning some of it. And people won't be surprised by the team we have and the style we play to be successful. And we're going to expect that next year. We're not going to get any freebies, and we're going to have to fight our way through to get back in the position we were in last year. We have a long way to go and a lot more to prove not only to ourselves but other people as well. It's an exciting challenge."

NET RESULT
Price holds the key for the Habs, who could climb to the top of the mountain – or slide down the valley.

DRIVING FORCE
The sublime Karlsson is more important to the Senators than any other player to any other team.

In Karlsson, the Senators also rely on one superstar more than any other team in the NHL, even more than the Oilers lean on McDavid. Ottawa's forward group is deep but lacks an elite scorer.

So does that mean we'll look back on 2016-17 as a fluke? Not necessarily. Ottawa's near future depends on its farm system, which boasts some real gems. In THN Future Watch 2017, the Senators scored three prospects inside our overall top 14. At No. 3: Thomas Chabot, who exploded into the public consciousness with a dominant showing on Canada's blueline at the 2017 world juniors. His ceiling is NHL all-star, and he has a real chance to make the Senators after they lost Marc Methot in the expansion draft. At No. 12: Colin White, who has earned Patrice Bergeron comparisons. At No. 14: Logan Brown, who's similar in size and style of play to Joe Thornton.

PRICE: FRANCOIS LACASSE/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES; KARLSSON: FRANCOIS LAPLANTE/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

The Senators have a respectable base at the moment, and their best current NHLers, Karlsson, Mark Stone and Mike Hoffman, are only in their mid-20s. That will keep them competitive, and if the prospect trio of Chabot, White and Brown pan out in the coming seasons, Ottawa will emerge as a surprise contender. If not, the Sens will toil in mediocrity.

6. WINNIPEG JETS

On the cover of THN Future Watch 2015, we anointed the Jets "your 2019 Stanley Cup champions." That prediction looks sillier by the year, as Winnipeg has missed the playoffs two straight seasons despite having the best youth crop of any NHL team.

The Jets look loaded for years to come at forward, led by Mark Scheifele and Patrik Laine, with Nikolaj Ehlers and Blake Wheeler also bringing fantastic offensive skills. Jacob Trouba and Dustin Byfuglien are big, physical blueline specimens, and monstrous Logan Stanley possesses major potential as a long-term project. Blindingly fast Kyle Connor and 200-foot center Jack Roslovic are ready to make NHL splashes, too. They brighten Winnipeg's forecast that much more.

So what's the problem? "Last season, we just allowed too many goals," Laine said. "It's hard if you have to score three or four goals every night to win. That's one of the things we need to improve. "

Laine is bang on. The Jets are porous defensively and especially in goal, where Connor Hellebuyck is supposed to be the future. He took a major step backward last season, however, which rattled the front office's confidence enough that they shelled out $8.2 million over two years to Steve Mason.

The Jets are also weak on special teams, especially the penalty kill, which ranked 25th and 26th the past two seasons. They look sexy on paper every year, but GM Kevin Cheveldayoff has to point a finger at coach Paul Maurice eventually if theory doesn't start turning into results. Maurice is among the game's best quotes and seems to be universally liked, but he's been to the playoffs just five times in his 19 NHL seasons. The Jets have the potential to break out just like the Leafs did last year, but they have to earn their long-term Cup contender status by winning a lot more.

7. VANCOUVER CANUCKS

The Canucks hold an important perch in Canadian hockey culture and thus deserve some ink, but it's merely a courtesy in this exercise. We know this franchise is many years away from Stanley Cup contention.

Daniel and Henrik Sedin will go down alongside Pavel Bure, Trevor Linden and Markus Naslund as the greatest Canucks ever, but the twins are holding the team back now. They're still good enough to give Vancouver a couple extra wins each year, but this team is better off bottoming out. The Canucks have used a pile of playoff misses in recent seasons to stockpile some intriguing prospects in defenseman Olli Juolevi and center Elias Pettersson, while Bo Horvat and Brock Boeser are heart-and-soul contributors to rely on up front. But Vancouver could use another can't-miss star.

Scoring sensation Andrei Svechnikov looms as the likely No. 1 overall draft pick in 2018. If only GM Jim Benning could convince the twins to accept trades to a Cup contender next March, the Canucks might sink low enough to earn more lottery balls than anyone else. The odds of the Sedins actually leaving, though, are almost zilch. So Canucks fans will have their patience tested for the next half-decade.

AGING LIKE FINE WINE

Once a wide-eyed greenhorn, Pavelski is now a grizzled greybeard unafraid to drop f-bombs on camera or deflect bombs from the point

BY DAVID POLLAK

TRAILING BY ONE GOAL, the San Jose Sharks were less than four minutes from elimination when the puck arrived on Joe Pavelski's stick just outside the Edmonton Oilers crease. A year ago, when he led the Sharks all the way to Stanley Cup final, his shot would have gone in. Pavelski's 14 goals, after all, were tops in the 2016 playoffs.

This year, however, his backhand shot pinged off the crossbar, then nicked the far post before being cleared. The Sharks eventually lost 3-1, dropping their first-round series in six games.

It was a painful moment for Pavelski, who has quietly become one of the NHL's most consistent goal scorers. He lacks the pedigree of the only two players who have scored more than his 192 goals over the past six seasons – first-overall picks Alex Ovechkin (257) and Steven Stamkos (202). But ask around and people in the know will say Pavelski, the 205th player drafted in the 2003, is a true student of the game, blessed with hockey smarts. Which is why less than 48 hours after his double-metal miss, he had already reviewed the video, trying to turn heartbreak into a learning experience. "You watch it a little bit because you want to see what it really was like," Pavelski said. "You try to learn from your mistakes. And whether it was a mistake or not, there are certain areas where you're still always trying to get a little better."

Although it has taken awhile for him to gain visibility, Pavelski has slowly earned league-wide recognition. Yet he still maintains a low profile, with a reserved public persona and family-oriented lifestyle. He married his high school sweetheart, Sarah, and along with their six-year-old son, Nathan, they spend summers boating and fishing at the lakefront home they own in Madison, Wis.

Madison is a special place for Pavelski, who led Wisconsin to the 2006 NCAA title as its leading scorer. Former Badger teammates, including Adam Burish and Tom Gilbert, spend the summer there as well. "We've got a great setup there, using those facilities and being around friends," Pavelski said. "It's a perfect area to decompress from the season and look forward to the next one."

Friends, including those without hockey connections, are important to him in San Jose as well. The Pavelskis have lived in the same Willow Glen neighborhood for more than a decade. For a while, they would bring Lucy, their chocolate Labrador retriever, to the small park where an informal dog group had formed so people and their pets could socialize. When Pavelski brought home a silver medal in 2010 from the Vancouver Olympics, the group threw a party in his honor. Now that Lucy is older, the trips to the park are less frequent. Instead, Pavelski and his wife are more likely to be watching Nathan play football, T-ball or hockey, where he skates in the same mini-mites league as Brent Burns' son, Jagger.

As well as being one of the Sharks' top offensive weapons, Pavelski is also the team's top golfer, a scratch player. His former coach, Todd McLellan, sees similarities in the way Pavelski prepares for both sports – how he's able to analyze the circumstances without overthinking. "He's such a cerebral player and person," said McLellan, who coached Pavelski from 2008 to 2015. "He thinks things through, he understands situations and then he's able to turn it into just playing."

McLellan named Pavelski one of four rotating alternate captains during the 2014-15 season after the 'C' was taken away from Joe Thornton. But it was current coach Pete DeBoer who gave the captaincy to Pavelski full time ahead of 2015-16. That created the unique situation of a team having two of its former captains, Thornton and Patrick Marleau, in the same lineup – and occasionally on the same line – as its current captain. "It could be really awkward, but it wasn't because of the character of the people we're dealing with," DeBoer said. "Joe and Patrick are so comfortable in their own skin and their place in the game and in the leadership hierarchy that it wasn't an issue."

Pavelski, too, gets credit for the smooth transition from DeBoer, who describes his captain as high energy, inclusive, approachable and honest. "He wears that on his sleeve," DeBoer said, "and he backs it up with what he does on the ice."

While Pavelski rarely shows much emotion publicly, fans got a glimpse of his fiery side in February 2015. The Sharks were featured in the Road to the NHL Stadium Series that month, and cameras recorded a 67-second tirade between periods in a game against Arizona that featured 20 f-bombs, followed by a quiet exchange with Burns that included one more. The Sharks were struggling to get into playoff position and trailed the Coyotes 2-0 at the time. San Jose went on to win 4-2, with Pavelski's hat trick leading the way.

Pavelski has worked hard to become one the NHL's best goal scorers, specifically when it comes to deflecting shots. At practices, he positions himself in the slot – high and low – with his back to the net, tipping one puck after another fired his way from the blueline. Teammates have adapted their games accordingly. "As a D-man, it's huge," said Marc-Edouard Vlasic. "You just throw it to an area and he'll find it. You just put it to where his stick is, and he'll find a way to tip it in."

SNEAKY SNIPER
Most fans wouldn't know it, but only two players (Ovechkin and Stamkos) have more goals than Pavelski over the past half-dozen seasons.

HE'S SUCH A CEREBRAL PLAYER AND PERSON. HE THINKS THINGS THROUGH & UNDERSTANDS SITUATIONS – Todd McLellan

It's now been more than a decade since Pavelski reached the NHL in November 2006. As a young player, he was motivated to improve his game by the talent around him, particularly Thornton and Marleau. Now 33 and entering his 12th NHL season, the Sharks captain finds himself in the mentor role. "You can go up and pick his brain whenever you want – he's really open to that," said 23-year-old Sharks center Chris Tierney. "But I think the best way for me to learn is watching him and seeing how he does it."

There are few better examples.

NHL TEAM REPORTS

REPEAT REPEAT
Expect a similar scene in the summer of 2018: we're picking Crosby and the Penguins to march in a third straight parade in Pittsburgh.

JOE SARGENT/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

EVERYTHING CHANGES. NOTHING CHANGES

The NHL is in total flux...except for the thing that matters most: the Penguins will reign again thanks to their superstar core

BY MATT LARKIN

IT'S AN ERA of unprecedented parity. Except it isn't. The NHL pours 30 teams, now 31, into a metaphorical paint mixer and shakes out a different result every year. Seven teams stole playoff spots in 2016-17 after missing in 2015-16. That's a 14-team swing.

In our modern hockey universe, 19-year-old Auston Matthews scores 40 goals, more than everyone except Sidney Crosby, while turning the Toronto Maple Leafs from punchline to powerhouse. Connor McDavid rattles off 100 points, 11 more than the closest player, and lifts the Edmonton Oilers into the playoffs for the first time in 11 seasons. The Nashville Predators enter the post-season as the No. 16 seed, sweep the first-place Chicago Blackhawks and reach the Stanley Cup final. We know now that we know nothing. That's especially true when it comes to the Central Division, which is so evenly matched among its top five or six teams that it took our prediction panel as long to hammer out those standings at it did the other three divisions combined. So, yes, we should expect shocking turnover again in 2017-18.

And yet, here we are, picking the Pittsburgh Penguins to three-peat as champions, a feat not accomplished since the New York Islanders won four straight Stanley Cups from 1980 to 1983. That will be 35 years ago next June. We're backing the Pens even though they've played a league-high 213 games over the past two seasons (regular season and playoffs), and despite the departures of Nick Bonino, Chris Kunitz, Trevor Daley, Ron Hainsey and Marc-Andre Fleury from the championship squad.

But, as coach Mike Sullivan told us last year, this team's motto is "Why not us?"

It helped Pittsburgh repeat, which no team had done since the 1998 Detroit Red Wings 19 years prior. The Penguins were "tired" and loaded with mileage entering last season, so why should that narrative scare us off now? Pittsburgh lost some support pieces, but superstar centers Sidney Crosby and Evgeni Malkin remain the engines driving this team, backed by stud goalie Matt Murray and speedy snipers Phil Kessel, Jake Guentzel and Conor Sheary. Heck, the Penguins went all the way without No. 1 blueliner Kris Letang last year, and he returns to the lineup. So we could see an improved Pittsburgh squad. Any team good enough to win two straight titles instantly becomes the favorite to win three.

The Pens still have stiff competition, of course. Dallas and Tampa Bay are poised for bounce-back campaigns. The Stars improved more than anyone else, adding Alexander

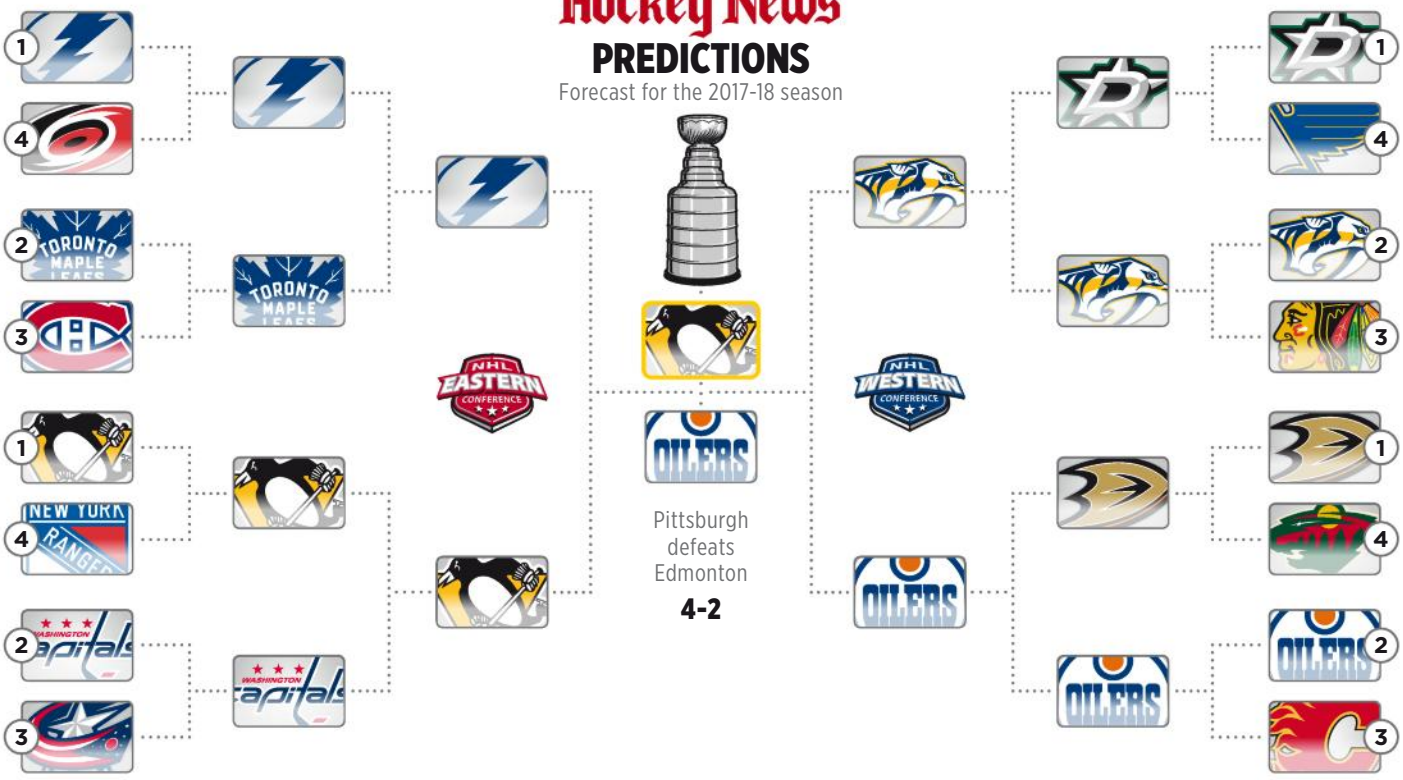
PREDICTIONS

Forecast for the 2017-18 season



CLASS IS IN SESSION

It'll be Crosby vs. McDavid in the final, but No. 97 will need a lesson from 87 before getting his first Stanley Cup.

Radulov and Martin Hanzal up front, Marc Methot on defense and Ben Bishop in net. They have an excellent shot at their second Central crown in three years. The Lightning, meanwhile, missed the playoffs by just one point despite losing Steven Stamkos to a torn meniscus in November. They'll be dangerous.

Ryan Getzlaf leads a strong Anaheim team backed by a superb young defense corps, and we can't rule out Nashville returning to the final given it boasts the sport's best blue-line quartet in Roman Josi, P.K. Subban, Mattias Ekholm and Ryan Ellis.

And it's time to take the Canadian squads seriously. The Leafs are a legit threat to win the Atlantic, armed with tremendous depth and youth at forward, and the Calgary Flames retooled on defense and in goal after making good progress last year. In the end, we expect the Oilers to rise from the West, setting up an epic Stanley Cup final between McDavid and his childhood idol Crosby. Maybe we'll witness a passing of the torch. Or maybe, just like when Mike Bossy's Isles schooled Wayne Gretzky's Oilers in 1983, the new era will have to wait one more year.

Anaheim DUCKS

BY ERIC STEPHENS

FOR ONCE, DISAPPOINTMENT was not part of the Ducks' playoff vocabulary. To a degree. The Game 7 second-round win over Edmonton at Honda Center not only broke a string of four consecutive defeats in decisive games at home, but it sent the Ducks to the Western Conference final for the second time in three years. That's where they ran into Nashville, which has replaced Detroit as Anaheim's playoff nemesis. Three post-season meetings against the Predators have ended in failure, and the latest one prevented the Ducks from making a third appearance in the Stanley Cup final, the first since winning it all in 2007.

Taking the final step remains their goal. It has been an elusive one, with key injuries at the wrong time hindering the Ducks in the most critical of post-season games. The aging trio of Ryan Getzlaf, Corey Perry and Ryan Kesler, backed by the emerging new core, returns for another realistic shot at a championship. The feeling they need one more piece to put them over the top still exists for this battle-tested contender.

OFFENSE The threesome of Getzlaf, Perry and Kesler still define this team, but relying on them as they approach their mid-30s to provide all the power over an entire season isn't realistic. The good news is the Ducks' younger forwards are increasingly becoming regular contributors. Rickard Rakell (33) and Jakob Silfverberg (23) combined for 56 goals, Nick Ritchie scored 14 times in his first full season and Ondrej Kase emerged as a skilled winger who could reach double figures.

Patrick Eaves is back and should add production, even if it'll be tough to duplicate his career-high 32 goals. Landing free agent Patrick Marleau would've been ideal, but the longtime San Jose goal-scorer took his talents to Toronto instead of Anaheim.

TOP BILLING
The Ducks have come to be defined by their deep and talented D-corps, but Ryan Getzlaf, the team captain since 2010 and perennial scoring leader, remains the face of the franchise.

ANDY DEVLIN/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

JOHN GIBSON

DEFENSE This is one of the NHL's best units. Cam Fowler, who signed an eight-year extension and could one day succeed Getzlaf as captain, will head up the blueline corps along with Hampus Lindholm for the foreseeable future.

Sami Vatanen wasn't traded and should rebound from a down season. Josh Manson is emerging as one of the league's better physical defenders. Right-shooting youngster Brandon Montour will be a regular and offers plenty of upside. Kevin Bieksa's best days are long behind him, but he's still valued by the coaching staff.

GOALTENDING Stardom has been elusive for John Gibson. He has put up strong numbers, but injuries or uneven play – both of which occurred in the 2017 playoffs – have kept him from joining the league's elite. Ryan Miller, acquired as a UFA, could help him get there. The former Vezina Trophy winner isn't accustomed to a clear-cut backup role, but he can mentor Gibson and still has enough left to hold the net for long stretches.

SPECIAL TEAMS The power play regressed throughout 2016-17 and into the playoffs. Montour could see an expanded role, particularly after Shea Theodore was dealt to Vegas to protect Vatanen and Manson. Fowler will again be a quarterback, though Getzlaf often operates at the point in a four-forward setup. The Ducks' penalty killing remained strong, finishing fourth-best in the NHL last season. Kesler, Silfverberg and Andrew Cogliano are PK stalwarts, with faceoff ace Antoine Vermette aiding their efforts.

INTANGIBLES The organizational depth might be tested as Kesler, Lindholm and Vatanen could miss time recovering from off-season surgeries. Kesler had to undergo a hip procedure, while Lindholm and Vatanen went under the knife for major shoulder operations.

ROOKIES Max Jones (24th overall) and Sam Steel (30th), Anaheim's top two picks in the 2016 NHL draft, will challenge for fourth-line spots, but coach Randy Carlyle often prefers grinders in those low-minute roles. Jones and Steel have the potential to develop into top-six forwards in time. If they don't crack the Ducks' lineup, they have to play one more season of junior before being eligible to skate in the AHL.

X-FACTOR Where does Perry go from his subpar 2016-17 season? Were his 19 goals and 53 points – his lowest full-season totals in a decade – a one-year blip or a sign that his days as a top-flight scorer are dwindling? The Ducks need more production from Perry as there's no guarantee Eaves and Rakell will hit the 30-goal plateau again.

THE BRASS Reaching the final four in the playoffs earned Carlyle a one-year extension that pushes his team option to 2019-20. Two new voices will join him on the coaching staff, as former NHLer Steve Konowalchuk and longtime AHL assistant coach Mark Morrison were brought in. Konowalchuk, who coached the WHL's Seattle Thunderbirds for six seasons, replaces Paul MacLean.

Future WATCH

1. JACOB LARSSON, D
AGE 20 TEAM Frolunda (Swe.)
Spent time maturing in Sweden after cracking Ducks' opening-day roster at 19 a year ago.
ACQUIRED 27th overall, 2015 NHL '17-18

2. MAX JONES, LW
AGE 19 TEAM London (OHL)
Power forward bumping his way through the OHL. Got into a few playoff games in the AHL.
ACQUIRED 24th overall, 2016 NHL '18-19

3. SAM STEEL, C
AGE 19 TEAM Regina (WHL)
Showed magical touch with 50-goal season. Just needs to build a pro-style frame.
ACQUIRED 30th overall, 2016 NHL '18-19

4. MAXIME COMTOIS, LW
AGE 18 TEAM Victoriaville (QMJHL)
Offense dried up in draft year, but he competes hard and is a powerful skater.
ACQUIRED 50th overall, 2017 NHL '20-21

5. JOSH MAHURA, D
AGE 19 TEAM Regina (WHL)
Offense-minded blueliner bounced back after knee injury and trade from Red Deer.
ACQUIRED 85th overall, 2016 NHL '21-22

6. TROY TERRY, C
AGE 20 TEAM Denver (NCHC)
WJC hero had breakout sophomore season and is almost ready to advance to next level.
ACQUIRED 148th overall, 2015 NHL '20-21

7. MARCUS PETTERSSON, D
AGE 21 TEAM Skelleftea (Swe.)
Large but light stay-at-home type. Big wingspan makes him a great asset in defensive end.
ACQUIRED 38th overall, 2014 NHL '19-20

8. ANTOINE MORAND, C
AGE 18 TEAM Acadie-Bathurst (QMJHL)
Small, creative playmaker gets pushed around a bit. Working at building inner-core strength.

9. JULIUS NATTINEN, C
AGE 20 TEAM Windsor (OHL)
Won WJC gold with Finland in 2016 and won Memorial Cup with Windsor in 2017.

10. DEVEN SIDEROFF, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Kamloops (WHL)
Steady improvement all three WHL seasons. Best suited to the energy line at the next level.

Arizona COYOTES

BY SARAH MCLELLAN

AFTER THEIR COMPETITIVENESS waned as they limped through the 2016-17 season, it was clear the Coyotes needed a boost to get their rebuild back on track. But it wasn't just the lineup that changed. Their identity did.

Amid a sweeping overhaul that included owner Andrew Barroway buying out his minority partners, Arizona cut ties with former franchise cornerstones and ushered out captain Shane Doan, goalie Mike Smith and coach Dave Tippett. The team welcomed several fresh faces, using the trade market to address key holes up front, on the back end and in net – adding reinforcements to help support its young core as the group acclimates to the big leagues.

Time will tell if these decisions were enough to spark improvement and inch the Coyotes up the standings after the team has missed out on the playoffs the past five seasons. What this makeover has done already, though, is signal a new era for the franchise.

OFFENSE The Coyotes acquired Derek Stepan from the Rangers to take over as the No. 1 center, a position that has been a weak spot for years. Stepan, a former 20-goal scorer who has eclipsed 50 points in each of the past four seasons, will help stabilize the middle of the ice, where the Coyotes figure to be particularly youthful. Sophomore Christian Dvorak had 15 goals as a rookie, while Dylan Strome will vie for a full-time job after an abbreviated stint last year. The team also obtained Nick Cousins from Philadelphia.

Arizona has plenty of options at left wing with Max Domi leading the pack, but it's is thin on the right side, especially after their leading goal-scorer, Radim Vrbata, signed with Florida.

DEFENSE Oliver Ekman-Larsson has long been an elite No. 1 defenseman, but now Arizona has a legit top pairing after acquiring Niklas Hjalmarsson from Chicago. A three-time Stanley Cup champion, Hjalmarsson's shutdown style complements Ekman-Larsson's offensive flair – which diminished last season as he played six weeks with a broken thumb and dealt with the death of his mother. Hjalmarsson joins a blueline that also includes Alex Goligoski, Luke Schenn, Jakob Chychrun and newly signed Adam Clendening.

OLIVER EKMAN-LARSSON

Goligoski, a prized addition a year ago, could make a greater impact now that he's familiar with the team, and Chychrun is a dynamic youngster who impressed as an 18-year-old in his rookie season.

GOALTENDING Despite a renaissance performance as perhaps the Coyotes' most valuable player, Smith was traded to Calgary. Arizona tabbed Antti Raanta to be his replacement after landing him in the same trade that netted Stepan. Raanta is primed for an opportunity to be a No. 1 after being a standout backup for INTANGIBLES Youth remains essential to the Coyotes successfully completing their rebuild, but proven pros may be an important catalyst. Not only have Arizona's off-season additions logged plenty of games, but Hjalmarsson, Stepan and Raanta have basked in a winning culture by representing some of the league's premier teams.

ROOKIES Strome isn't the only rookie contending for a roster spot with the Coyotes. Clayton Keller, who appeared in three games at the end of last season after leaving Boston University, will also audition. Keller was the league's top-ranked prospect in THN's Future Watch 2017 and enters the season as one of the early favorites for the Calder Trophy. Christian Fischer, who spent much of 2016-17 in the minors, is another possibility at right wing.

X-FACTOR How the off-season additions integrate into the lineup will partly determine whether the Coyotes succeed, but the youngsters also have influence since they comprise a sizeable chunk of the roster. If the two groups can work together effectively, Arizona has a good chance to improve.

THE BRASS GM John Chayka formed a brain trust with Tippett and former president of hockey operations Gary Drummond last season. But with Tippett out the door and Drummond – who was also a co-owner – moving on after getting bought out, Chayka has been the face of the Coyotes' maneuvering.

the past four seasons. Whether or not he finds a groove as a starter will help decide the Coyotes' trajectory.

SPECIAL TEAMS New arrivals like Stepan and Hjalmarsson should spruce up Arizona's atrocious special teams. Stepan is an established penalty killer who can win faceoffs, and Hjalmarsson is a prolific shot-blocker. An improved Ekman-Larsson is also key, as he quarterbacks the power play. A different scheme with the man advantage seems likely after the team parted ways with assistant coach Newell Brown.

DOG IN THE FIGHT
Arizona is counting on production from feisty undersized winger Max Domi, whose sophomore season was cut short by an injury he sustained engaging in fisticuffs.

Future WATCH

1. CLAYTON KELLER, C
AGE 19 TEAM Boston University (HE)
Skilled pivot left NCAA after one year. Helped Team USA beat Canada at the 2017 WJC.

2. DYLAN STROME, C
AGE 20 TEAM Erie (OHL)
Lack of foot speed and physical maturity has forestalled his ascension to regular NHL duty.
ACQUIRED 3rd overall, 2015 NHL '17-18

3. CHRISTIAN FISCHER, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Tucson (AHL)
Has a pro-style frame and plays a heavy game. Skating is gradually coming along.
ACQUIRED 32nd overall, 2015 NHL '18-19

4. PIERRE-OLIVIER JOSEPH, D
AGE 18 TEAM Charlottetown (QMJHL)
Smart, composed puck-mover has great mobility but needs physical development.
ACQUIRED 23rd overall, 2017 NHL '19-20

5. NICK MERKLEY, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Kelowna (WHL)
Intelligent, undersized winger has good hockey IQ, but he's lousy at staying healthy.
ACQUIRED 30th overall, 2015 NHL '19-20

6. KYLE WOOD, D
AGE 21 TEAM Tucson (AHL)
Towering, beefy defender with a big shot needs to ramp up skating to get to next level.
ACQUIRED From Col, Feb. 2016 NHL '19-20

7. ADIN HILL, G
AGE 21 TEAM Tucson (AHL)
Former Portland workhorse stopper had up-and-down challenging rookie pro season.
ACQUIRED 76th overall, 2015 NHL '20-21

8. BRANDON HICKEY, D
AGE 21 TEAM Boston University (HE)
The return on the Mike Smith trade got more offensively involved throughout junior year.
ACQUIRED From Cgy, June 2017 NHL '19-20

9. FILIP WESTERLUND, D
AGE 18 TEAM Frolunda (Swe.)
Westerlund's skating, passing and puck control abilities make him stand out.
ACQUIRED 44th overall, 2017 NHL '21-22

10. RYAN MACINNIS, C
AGE 21 TEAM Tucson (AHL)
Lanky pivot plays a responsible two-way game, but he was snakebitten around net as rookie pro.

Boston BRUINS

BY MIKE LOFTUS

AN ERA ENDED in Boston in 2016-17, with immediate, positive results. Claude Julien, the longest-tenured coach in the NHL at the time and Boston's all-time wins leader behind the bench, was fired just short of 10 complete seasons, and the Bruins returned to the playoffs for the first time since 2013-14 under his replacement, Bruce Cassidy.

The Bruins went 18-8-1 under Cassidy, who hadn't held an NHL head coaching position since his second and final season with the Capitals in 2003-04. Players responded to his faster-paced, attack-oriented style, and management and fans loved his 11-4-1 record at TD Garden, where the Bruins had been in danger of finishing below .500 for the second straight season. Cassidy, who spent the previous eight years with the Bruins' AHL affiliate in Providence (five as head coach), signed a multi-year deal shortly after a six-game, first-round loss to the Ottawa Senators in which every game was decided by a single goal.

OFFENSE Brad Marchand (39 goals, 85 points) and Patrice Bergeron (53 points) continued to establish themselves among the league's top forward tandems, and 21-year-old winger David Pastrnak put up 34 goals in his first full NHL season.

Scoring depth, however, must be addressed. David Krejci, Boston's only other 20-goal scorer last season, must establish better chemistry with wingers, and more production is needed from power forward David Backes, who scored 17 goals and 38 points in the first season of his five-year, $30-million deal.

The Bruins think several young forwards are ready to step in and contribute and that Cassidy's aggressive, rush-supporting system will result in scoring from defensemen other than Torey Krug (51 points).

NOSE FOR THE NET
Long known as an agitator and complementary two-way forward, left winger Brad Marchand earned Hart Trophy votes in 2016-17 and entered star stratosphere.

ZDENO CHARA

JANA CHYTILOVA/FREESTYLE PHOTOGRAPHY/GETTY IMAGES

DEFENSE He's 40 years old and entering the final season of his contract, but captain Zdeno Chara remains a quality shutdown defender. He and veteran Adam McQuaid are all that remain from the defense corps that won the Stanley Cup in 2011 and reached the final in 2013 (although Krug debuted that post-season).

The Bruins' projected top seven has only two left-handed shots (Chara and Krug), with late-blooming Kevan Miller or ex-Jet Paul Postma expected to try the left side. The B's anticipate a 20-year-old (Brandon Carlo, mentored by Chara last season) and a 19-year-old (Charlie McAvoy, a 2016 first-round draftee) in the rotation.

GOALTENDING For the third straight season, the lack of an effective backup led Tuukka Rask to wear down. He had a 2.00 goals-against average and .927 save percentage in 31 appearances in the first half, then slid to 2.47 and .904 over 34 second-half appearances. Cassidy, however, gave Rask more rest down the stretch by giving regular assignments to veteran backup Anton Khudobin, who went 6-1-0 under the new coach. That system will likely continue.

SPECIAL TEAMS With four-time Selke Trophy winner Bergeron and Marchand the top forward tandem, and Chara joined by big shot-blockers McQuaid and Miller, the Bruins led the NHL in penalty-killing efficiency. With the exception of veteran center Dominic Moore, they'll bring their key personnel back. Marchand, a first-unit regular for the first time last season, responded with 24 power play points, while Pastrnak, another first-unit newcomer, led the club with 10 power play goals. Those moves gave the B's a more effective second group, which included Krejci and Backes.

INTANGIBLES The Bruins want to go younger, which makes the leadership of core veterans – Chara, Bergeron, Krejci, Marchand, McQuaid and Backes – critical. There are bound to be bumps in the road, so besides being productive, they must be patient, positive mentors. Cassidy, in his first full season (and with an altered cast of assistant coaches), has to sell everyone on staying the course.

ROOKIES McAvoy's playoff splash (26:11 per game, paired with Chara), just weeks out of Boston University, creates great expectations for his rookie season. Anders Bjork (52 points in 39 games at Notre Dame) tops the list of wingers who could win a job, and the Bruins are also very high on two-way center Jakob Forsbacka Karlsson.

X-FACTOR Cassidy, citing Pittsburgh's success mixing youngsters with star players, is counting on the veterans to bring the kids along. If it works, the B's see themselves as a deep, multi-faceted group. If not, they'll again rely on too few to do too much.

THE BRASS Third-year GM Don Sweeney has successfully restocked the prospect cupboard, but hasn't acquired much established talent. He may be forced to use some of the former to add the latter if this year's defense corps doesn't work out.

1. CHARLIE MCAVOY, D
AGE 19 TEAM Boston University (HE)
Standout performer for Team USA at 2017 WJC. Calder hopeful is strong skater with solid frame.

2. ZACH SENYSHYN, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Sault Ste. Marie (OHL)
Fast and slick, he can score highlight-reel goals, and he has a hard shot from the wing.
ACQUIRED 15th overall, 2015 NHL '17-18

3. JAKOB FORSBACKA KARLSSON, C
AGE 20 TEAM Boston University (HE)
Takes all aspects of the game seriously. Left NCAA to turn pro after sophomore season.

4. RYAN LINDGREN, D
AGE 19 TEAM Minnesota (Big Ten)
Makes up for lack of size with passion. He's likely to turn pro after sophomore season.
ACQUIRED 49th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

5. JAKUB ZBORIL, D
AGE 20 TEAM Saint John (QMJHL)
Physical style will serve him well in pro game, but he needs to show up more often.
ACQUIRED 13th overall, 2015 NHL '18-19

6. TRENT FREDERIC, C
AGE 19 TEAM Wisconsin (Big Ten)
Big center flashed offensive promise as freshman. He may be a leader for U.S. at 2018 WJC.
ACQUIRED 29th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

7. JEREMY LAUZON, D
AGE 20 TEAM Rouyn-Noranda (QMJHL)
Good size and a well-rounded game. He contributed for Canada at the WJC.
ACQUIRED 52nd overall, 2015 NHL '19-20

8. URHO VAAKANAINEN, D
AGE 18 TEAM JYP (Fin.)
With an almost unparalled ability to skate, he's physical and has a promising offensive bent.
ACQUIRED 18th overall, 2017 NHL '21-22

9. JAKE DEBRUSK, LW
AGE 20 TEAM Providence (AHL)
Ex-NHLer Louie DeBrusk's son, Jake had 213 shots in his first pro season with Providence.
ACQUIRED 14th overall, 2015 NHL '18-19

10. PETER CEHLARIK, LW
AGE 22 TEAM Providence (AHL)
Made smooth adjustment from Sweden by showing nice finishing ability in AHL.

BEST-CASE SCENARIO
Jake Gardiner

SCOUTING REPORT
Skating is Vaakanainen's calling card, and he has offensive upside to his game. An early hit, he has already played against men for two seasons, and he's fine with physicality. His hockey sense could improve.

Buffalo SABRES

BY JOHN VOGL

THIS TIME AROUND, the Sabres think they have it right. Buffalo's carousel of coaches and GMs has landed on Phil Housley and Jason Botterill. The Sabres hired Botterill to replace Tim Murray, making the longtime Pittsburgh executive their third GM in five years. They picked Housley to replace Dan Bylsma, making the Hall of Fame defenseman their fourth coach in five seasons. The newcomers will seek to implement owner Terry Pegula's four-point plan. He wants to improve the discipline, structure, communication and character of the organization. There's little doubt those elements were lacking.

Bylsma's message either didn't get through or was ignored by the players. The word "disconnect" was thrown around regularly. Players were late for meetings. Though everyone said they liked each other, there was little semblance of team play. Botterill didn't waste any time making trades and adding free agents. Housley called all the players soon after he was hired, establishing open lines of communication while laying out his expectations. Buffalo hopes it leads to ending a six-year playoff drought.

OFFENSE A high-ankle sprain sustained the day before the 2015-16 season opener limited No. 1 center Jack Eichel to 61 games, but he finished with an impressive 24 goals and 57 points, placing him 11th in points per game. If he stays healthy, Eichel is a dark horse to win the NHL scoring title. Ryan O'Reilly admittedly failed in the leadership category while putting up 55 points.

Botterill and Housley promised a fast-paced style of play. The Sabres are solid at right wing with Kyle Okposo, Sam Reinhart and the return of Jason Pominville. The big question is on the left side. Evander Kane is the headliner, but he's entering the final season of his contract. Buffalo could trade last year's leading goal-scorer. The Sabres hope they got a steal with left winger Benoit Pouliot. Signed on the cheap after being bought out by Edmonton, he'll get a chance to rebound.

NOT A DULL BOY
Hockey players are often reticent to make bold comments to the media, but 20-year-old Jack Eichel pulled no punches calling out his Sabres teammates after last season.

DEFENSE Botterill prioritized fixing the blueline and made two trades to do that. Marco Scandella will get top-pair minutes after being stuck behind Minnesota's well-regarded workhorses. Nathan Beaulieu gets a fresh start after being a healthy scratch for Montreal during the playoffs. Buffalo also signed 24-year-old KHLer Victor Antipin. The trio should take pressure off Rasmus Ristolainen, who starts well but gets bogged down in an avalanche of minutes. Just 22 years old, he's entering his fifth pro season. He set career highs with 39 assists and 45 points in 79 games last year.

Housley built a winner with the 'D' in Nashville, and the Sabres expect him to rejuvenate Zach Bogosian and Jake McCabe. Bogosian hasn't performed since being acquired from the Jets in 2015.

GOALTENDING The Sabres allowed an NHL-worst 34.3 shots per game, but Robin Lehner (.920) and Anders Nilsson (.923) combined for the fifth-best save percentage. If Buffalo can keep the shot volume down, Lehner and reacquired crease mate Chad Johnson should add more victories. Lehner set a career high with 59 appearances and became a vocal leader in the dressing room. He needs to prove he can stop a breakaway after opponents scored on all eight shootout attempts last season.

SPECIAL TEAMS Buffalo had the league's best power play. There's a new coaching staff, but they shouldn't meddle with the effective unit led by Eichel, Okposo, O'Reilly and Ristolainen. The penalty kill ranked just 25th. Scandella and Pominville logged some PK ice time in Minnesota, so they should pitch in.

INTANGIBLES The dressing room was a mess. The Sabres need forceful leadership. Botterill and Housley will be looking for a new captain after the departure of Brian Gionta. Eichel and O'Reilly are the leading candidates. Buffalo needs an identity.

ROOKIES Right winger Nick Baptiste scored 25 goals in 59 AHL games last season, plus three more in 14 NHL games. He has the size and speed to make a difference in Housley's system, but he'll have to rise above the depth added by Botterill. Prized defenseman Brendan Guhle will start his pro career in the AHL.

X-FACTOR The Sabres went through a complete teardown to get Eichel. It's his team. A full season at the pace Eichel finished 2016-17 could propel Buffalo to the next level.

THE BRASS During Botterill's 10 seasons in Pittsburgh, including seven as assistant/associate GM, he earned praise as a salary cap guru. He helped the Penguins add pieces at the trade deadline despite their stars' big salaries. With Eichel expected to take up a lot of cap space with an extension, Botterill will put his experience to work.

Calgary FLAMES

BY RANDY SPORTAK

THE YOUTH INFUSION has been constant and effective over the past few years in Calgary. In turn, the Flames took the bold step of adding a couple of veterans at key spots in the hopes of becoming a legitimate Stanley Cup contender.

Having made the playoffs twice in the past three seasons on the backs of a strong defense corps and young talent up front, the Flames' biggest moves of the summer were to switch up the goaltending tandem – again – by acquiring Mike Smith from Arizona and then creating one of the league's best top-four blueline crews by paying a heavy price to land Travis Hamonic from the New York Islanders. If Smith and new backup goalie Eddie Lack can hold up their end of the deal, this team is a contender.

OFFENSE Johnny Gaudreau and Sean Monahan once again were the top two point producers last season, but both had down years. Whether it was adjusting to coach Glen Gulutzan, pressure from inking big-money contracts or any other reason, the club's young dynamic duo struggled. Expect a bounce-back campaign, especially if they can find a third part to the line, be it Micheal Ferland or Troy Brouwer, whose first season in Calgary was below par. More is expected from Brouwer as well as Sam Bennett, who suffered the proverbial sophomore slump.

From there, though, there was plenty of good news. Mikael Backlund is coming off a career year and centered one of the NHL's top lines with Michael Frolik and Matthew Tkachuk, and the blueline has four players who will provide scoring punch in Dougie Hamilton, Mark Giordano, T.J. Brodie and Hamonic.

DEFENSE The plan is for Hamonic to skate with Brodie, while Giordano and Hamilton remain a tandem. The Monahan line – which isn't the strongest at defending – will have two pairings to help keep the puck as far away from the Calgary net as possible. That isn't a concern with the Tkachuk-Backlund-Frolik line, which is the go-to trio for defensive-zone draws and had incredible possession numbers last season.

The third defense pairing, pegged to be Michael Stone and perhaps Matt Bartkowski or a youngster such as Brett Kulak or Rasmus Andersson, will likely be a 12- to 15-minute duo, but it's paramount they, as well as forwards such as Bennett and Brouwer, aren't on the negative side of the possession ledger.

GOALTENDING The Flames have a pair of high-end goaltending prospects in Jon Gillies and Tyler Parsons, but they don't want to rush either of them, especially because the rest of the squad is built to win now. That's why Calgary brought in Smith – who has two years remaining on his contract – and Lack, due to be a UFA after this season. Smith, a proven No. 1 goalie pegged to start around 60 games, should provide enough time for one of the prospects to develop fully.

SPECIAL TEAMS Through the first 15 games last season, the Flames had a dreadful power play and a tire fire of a penalty kill. Yet, when the season ended, they were 10th on the PP and 12th on the PK. With Monahan, Gaudreau and Hamilton entering their prime years, a step backward on the power play would be inexcusable. All the key components of last year's man-advantage success are returning. As for the penalty kill, Smith and Hamonic are expected to spur improvement.

INTANGIBLES It took nearly one-quarter of the season for the Flames to see results of changes that Gulutzan made to the game plan, instilling a style that relied more on puck possession than the run-and-gun approach under previous coach Bob Hartley. Those early-season struggles didn't cost them a playoff spot, but it did increase the pressure to win over the final 60 games. That shouldn't be an issue this season.

ROOKIES There are a few roster spots available for rookies, both at forward and on defense, but there are no surefire players ready to grab them. Calgary made a splash signing college free agent Spencer Foo, but he's just one of a handful of players who will be in a dogfight for an NHL gig.

X-FACTOR The Flames should be a playoff team and Cup contender. If they're not, the undoing – barring injuries – will most likely be Smith faltering between the pipes or not enough offensive support for the top guns.

THE BRASS This is the fourth season in Calgary for GM Brad Treliving, and there's no doubt he's put his stamp on the team, not only by hiring Gulutzan prior to last season but building a squad around a strong blueline and creating depth up front. The ongoing quest, though, is to solidify the crease.

Carolina HURRICANES

BY LUKE DECOCK

AFTER ADDRESSING A few key problem areas without losing anyone of note off the roster, the Hurricanes will be dramatically improved this season. Whether that's enough to end the NHL's longest playoff drought is less certain.

The addition of Scott Darling in net and the return of Justin Williams on the wing should propel GM Ron Francis' rebuilding process as it enters its fourth season. With a talented young blueline already assembled, Carolina still has to show significant improvement in other areas to compete in the difficult Metropolitan Division. The Hurricanes haven't qualified for the post-season since 2009, and while the roster has gotten younger and faster, they haven't risen much in the standings. Still, if Darling can offer a significant upgrade in goal, there's no reason this can't be the year the drought ends.

OFFENSE Jeff Skinner has emerged from a few concussion-hampered seasons to become an offensive force. With Skinner and Sebastian Aho, who clicked for 24 goals as a 19-year-old rookie, the Hurricanes have two bona fide scoring threats on the wing. The weakness is down the middle, where Francis hoped to add a top-six center to supplement Jordan Staal and Victor Rask. They ended up with Marcus Kruger, who adds depth but won't provide much in the way of offense.

While Aho has plenty of upside and room to grow, the Hurricanes also need improvement from Rask, Teuvo Teravainen and Elias Lindholm, all of whom have the potential to be impact players but need to contribute on a consistent basis. Williams will unquestionably have a positive influence on the team, but the Hurricanes need him to put up points as well. He turns 36 in October after tallying 24 goals and 48 points with Washington last season.

DEFENSE While the offense-minded Justin Faulk and Noah Hanifin get most of the attention, Jaccob Slavin and Brett Pesce have quietly become one of the NHL's most underrated pairings. (Slavin was re-signed to a seven-year, $37.1-million contract in July after earning a couple of down-ballot Norris Trophy votes, so the secret is getting out.) Those four players give the Canes a young – Faulk, at 25, is the grizzled veteran – and versatile core defensive group that fits all the modern puck-moving requirements and still has immense potential for growth.

Newcomer Trevor van Riemsdyk, who was acquired from Vegas in exchange for a second-round draft pick, stabilizes the third pairing. The Hurricanes hope another young defenseman – possibly Haydn Fleury, the seventh overall pick in the 2014 draft – can win a job alongside van Riemsdyk in training camp. If not, Klas Dahlbeck returns to provide depth.

GOALTENDING After a decade with Cam Ward as the No. 1 netminder and only one playoff appearance sine 2006 – Ward and Eddie Lack combined to finish 27th in the NHL in save percentage last season – it was time for a change. It's a new era with Darling taking over in net. He had terrific numbers as a backup in Chicago and now gets his chance to shine as a starter. At 33, Ward has the maturity to assume a secondary role.

SPECIAL TEAMS Even with erratic goaltending at times, the Canes were one of the NHL's best penalty-killing teams and finished second in the league with 10 shorthanded goals. Gone are PK fixtures Viktor Stalberg, Jay McClement and Ron Hainsey, but Kruger is expected to take on an important role. Given the skill at forward and triggermen like Faulk and Hanifin, the power play should've converted at a better rate – it ranked 21st overall – and it's fair to expect improvement.

Jeff Skinner, back on track after concussion issues, makes masterful use of his superb skating ability to lead the way offensively for the goal-starved Hurricanes.

INTANGIBLES Williams, a key member of the 2006 Stanley Cup-champion Hurricanes, will be a positive influence in a young dressing room. Carolina also continued to pluck experienced winners off the Blackhawks' roster, adding former Cup champs in Darling, Kruger and van Riemsdyk.

ROOKIES There doesn't appear to be any openings up front, but there's a competition on the third 'D' pairing. Fleury is at the top of the list, but Roland McKeown, Trevor Carrick, Jake Chelios and Jake Bean all have a shot.

X-FACTOR This is a team built for the long term – only Ward and forwards Derek Ryan and Lee Stempniak are scheduled to become UFAs next summer.

THE BRASS Francis has been painstakingly patient as GM, and this could be the season that pays dividends. He and his managment team have drafted well and put the Canes in a position to become a contender in the years to come. Bill Peters enters his fourth season behind the bench, earning plaudits for his efficient style of play.

1. JULIEN GAUTHIER, RW
AGE 19 TEAM Saint John (QMJHL)
Good strength, speed and conditioning, but his goal-scoring dried up last season.
ACQUIRED 21st overall, 2016 NHL '18-19

2. MARTIN NECAS, RW
AGE 18 TEAM Brno (Cze.)
A fast player who has hot and cold spells. Already has strong defensive awareness.
ACQUIRED 12th overall, 2017 NHL '19-20

3. JAKE BEAN, D
AGE 19 TEAM Calgary (WHL)
An offensive juggernaut in the WHL, his hockey sense keeps him one step ahead.
ACQUIRED 13th overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

4. NICOLAS ROY, C
AGE 20 TEAM Chicoutimi (QMJHL)
Rapid development for fourth-rounder, he projects to be an offensive dynamo.
ACQUIRED 96th overall, 2015 NHL '19-20

5. JANNE KUOKKANEN, C
AGE 19 TEAM London (OHL)
Capable of playing all forward positions, he needs to mature and develop physically.
ACQUIRED 43rd overall, 2016 NHL '18-19

6. HAYDN FLEURY, D
AGE 21 TEAM Charlotte (AHL)
Plays a solid, two-way game. He'll dazzle with smart plays more than offensive acumen.
ACQUIRED 7th overall, 2014 NHL '17-18

7. ALEKSI SAARELA, C
AGE 20 TEAM Lukko (Fin.)
Speedster had terrific finishing nine-game stint in AHL after coming over from Finland.
ACQUIRED From NYR, Feb. 2016 NHL '18-19

8. ALEX NEDELJKOVIC, G
AGE 21 TEAM Florida (ECHL)
Undersized rookie pro looked overmatched in AHL, but had solid playoff run in ECHL.
ACQUIRED 37th overall, 2014 NHL '20-21

9. ROLAND MCKEOWN, D
AGE 21 TEAM Charlotte (AHL)
Offensive production didn't translate to AHL for solid two-way depth defender.
ACQUIRED From LA, Feb. 2015 NHL '19-20

10. WARREN FOEGELE, LW
AGE 21 TEAM Erie (OHL)
Rangy winger had breakout offensive season as OHL overager. Nice touch around net.

Chicago BLACKHAWKS

BY MATT CARLSON

FOLLOWING A FEEBLE playoff flop, Blackhawks management promised big changes. It was no idle threat. Chicago was shaken all the way to its core of high-priced stars after exiting the post-season in the first round for the second straight spring. The edict came from team president John McDonough days after the Blackhawks – who finished first in the West in the regular season with 109 points – were swept in four games by Nashville. McDonough said it was "unacceptable" and called on GM Stan Bowman to reshape the roster.

The team's core players – forwards Jonathan Toews and Patrick Kane, defensemen Duncan Keith and Brent Seabrook and goalie Corey Crawford – are still in place. But among the departed are defenseman Niklas Hjalmarsson and winger Marian Hossa, key members of Chicago's three Stanley Cup teams. Hjalmarsson was traded to Arizona in a deal that netted defenseman Connor Murphy, a 24-year-old who Bowman believes has solid upside. Hossa, 38, won't play next season – and possibly ever again – because of side effects from medication to treat a skin disorder. Sniping winger Artemi Panarin was sent to Columbus in a multi-player trade to reacquire a more complete physical forward in Brandon Saad, who was part of Chicago's Cup runs in 2013 and 2015.

OFFENSE The Blackhawks remain a premier possession team. Saad figures to land back on a line with Toews, with whom he once prospered. Richard Panik emerged as a hardnosed scoring threat last year with 22 goals and 44 points. Kane's puckhandling wizardry is at its peak. He clicked with center Artem Anisimov and Panarin, and Kane will make anyone who steps in for Panarin look better. That could be 35-year-old Patrick Sharp, who returns from Dallas after hip surgery and signing as a free agent. Alex DeBrincat, the OHL's MVP, is also in the mix to play with Kane.

PLAYOFF RECORD
46-30 (since 2013)

The Hawks are banking on improvement from last year's rookie forwards Ryan Hartman, Nick Schmaltz, Vinnie Hinostroza, John Hayden and Tanner Kero. Ditto for Tomas Jurco, who arrived from Detroit in February.

DEFENSE Things thin out quickly after Keith and Seabrook. Besides Hjalmarsson, also gone are Trevor van Riemsdyk and UFAs Brian Campbell and Johnny Oduya.

Bowman has no shortage of praise for Murphy, a 6-foot-4, 212-pounder who should get more than the 19:10 of ice time he averaged in Arizona. Michal Kempny will have a bigger role in his second season. Top prospect Gustav Forsling split last year between Chicago and AHL Rockford but will be asked to make an impact, as will 27-year-old Jan Rutta, the highly sought-after Euro free agent signing out of the Czech Republic. Ville Pokka, who has spent the past three seasons in AHL Rockford, will also vie for an NHL job.

GOALTENDING The No. 1 job belongs to Crawford, but super-backup Scott Darling, a pending UFA, was traded to Carolina where he was handed the starting job. Bowman said the team's new backup is Anton Forsberg, a 24-year-old who came over as part of the Panarin-for-Saad trade. For insurance, the Blackhawks signed UFA Jean-Francois Berube, who played for the Islanders last season before being selected by Vegas in the expansion draft.

SPECIAL TEAMS The challenge will be finding penalty-killing forwards to replace Hossa and center Marcus Kruger, who was traded to Vegas and then flipped to Carolina. With Panarin gone, Chicago needs a new trigger-man on the power play – he led the Blackhawks with nine PP goals last season. Expect a different look on the man advantage, with Kane setting it up or more net-front presence on point shots.

INTANGIBLES In being swept by Nashville in Round 1, the Hawks had their longest off-season since the start of the Toews-Kane era in 2008-09. With management fuming and core players under the microscope, expect a motivated group to arrive at training camp.

ROOKIES All eyes are on DeBrincat, who scored 65 goals and 127 points in the OHL last year. The 19-year-old Michigan native is only 5-foot-7, but size hasn't hampered him so far. More immediately, Chicago needs a defensemen, Forsling or Pokka, to fill a spot and eat minutes without making too many mistakes.

X-FACTOR This time, something other than just salary cap constraints forced Bowman to rip up his roster. It doesn't matter how the Blackhawks reach the playoffs, but they must make a deep, spirited post-season run.

THE BRASS Mike Kitchen, a former teammate of coach Joel Quenneville and an assistant in Chicago for seven seasons, was fired by Bowman days after Nashville's sweep. Don Granato and Ulf Samuelsson were added. A 16-year NHL defenseman, Samuelsson played with Quenneville for five seasons in Hartford.

LOW-CARB DIET
Patrick Kane enjoyed the two best years of his career alongside Artemi 'Bread Man' Panarin, who will no longer be on No. 88's opposite wing after being traded to Columbus.

Colorado AVALANCHE

BY MIKE CHAMBERS

AFTER THE WORST season in the NHL's salary cap era, Colorado's management didn't hit its roster with a wrecking ball as many expected. En route to a club-record low 22 wins and 48 points, the Avalanche were quiet at the trade deadline and didn't acquire any additional draft choices in June, days after losing budding goaltender Calvin Pickard to Vegas in the expansion draft. They bought out 37-year-old defenseman Francois Beauchemin, didn't qualify RFA center Mikhail Grigorenko and made modest moves on July 1 and beyond.

Colorado's 48 points were the fewest since the expansion Atlanta Thrashers opened business with 39 points in 1999-2000. The Avs have been selling tickets for 2017-18 on the premise that everything will be OK in the coming season, that second-year coach Jared Bednar will now have a handle on a team that finished last in scoring and defense, and that the young prospects who will replace a handful of 30-somethings will make all the difference. That seems awfully optimistic.

OFFENSE Newcomers Colin Wilson and Nail Yakupov join a toxic core of forwards who struggled mightily last season. The high-priced trio of Nathan MacKinnon (16 goals), Matt Duchene (18) and Gabriel Landeskog (18) each failed to reach 20 goals and secondary scoring was nearly nonexistent. Superbly talented Mikko Rantanen, 20, led Colorado with 20 goals and should easily improve on his production in his sophomore season. Joe Colborne scored three goals on opening night, then just one more in his next 61 games.

No defensemen reached 10 goals. Late-season arrivals Sven Andrighetto (acquired from Montreal) and Tyson Jost (signed from North Dakota) have promise, but no true top-six forward was acquired in the off-season.

DEFENSE As of mid-July, the only NHL-signed defensemen on the roster were Tyson Barrie, Erik Johnson and Mark Barberio. Nikita Zadorov will be signed as an RFA, but beyond those four the blueline is bare.

Russian rearguard Andrei Mironov, 23, is set to join the Avs after playing five seasons in the KHL, but he's unproven on North American ice. Among other prospects, a pair of 22-year-olds, Chris Bigras and Anton Lindholm, could step in.

GOALTENDING Jonathan Bernier was signed to replace Pickard. The plan is for Bernier to back up Semyon Varlamov, who had season-ending hip and groin surgeries after being statistically outperformed by Pickard for the third straight year. Nobody questions Varlamov's elite talent. But after three disappointing seasons in Colorado, many doubt whether he'll ever return to the form that saw him become a Vezina Trophy finalist in 2013-14.

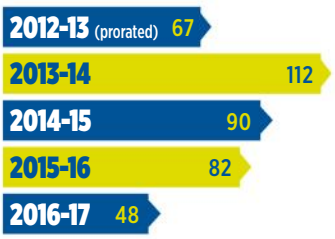
Regular Season Points



INTANGIBLES The historic failure that was 2016-17 embarrassed the organization from top to bottom. Will the roster enter the season fiercely motivated, or will last year's losing stench follow the Avs into 2017-18? The potential of a rookie-laden lineup may help the psyche of the club.

ROOKIES All eyes will be on Jost, 19, and Mironov. There's also a good chance that left winger A.J. Greer, 20, and D-men Bigras and Lindholm primarily play in the NHL this season. Former University of Michigan captain J.T. Compher, 22, is also expected to make the team, so the Avs could have five or more rookies on their season-opening roster.

X-FACTOR Duchene was expected to be traded for a hefty return, but it hadn't happened midway through the summer. It's probably best for both parties that he moves on to another team. As long as Duchene remains in Colorado, the Avs blueline won't improve and the team will continue to struggle.

THE BRASS The Avalanche are at the bottom of the league because GM Joe Sakic has made too many mistakes in his four years on the job, and owner Josh Kroenke is unwilling to step in and relieve the Hall of Famer because of who he is and what he represents to the Colorado hockey community. The Avs are seemingly in no hurry to rebuild through blockbuster trades and free agent signings. So expect another painful season, but with a younger roster.

SPECIAL TEAMS Months after firing assistant coaches Tim Army (offense), Dave Farrish (defense) and Francois Allaire (goaltending), the Avs hired Ray Bennett to replace Army and Jussi Parkkila to take over for Allaire. Bednar retained defensive assistant Nolan Pratt, the former Avalanche defenseman who worked with Bednar for the Calder Cup-champion Lake Erie Monsters in 2015-16. Army, Farrish and Allaire were holdovers from Patrick Roy's staff and likely retained because they were under contract through 2016-17. Will the bench moves help? They can't hurt – the Avs ranked last in power play efficiency and 29th on the penalty kill last season.

NEXT OF 'KINNON

Nathan MacKinnon, just 22 and already a veteran of four NHL seasons, has plenty of room to grow and is a key pillar of the Avs' future as they try to return to respectability.

Columbus BLUE JACKETS

BY AARON PORTZLINE

SAY THIS FOR the Blue Jackets: they are anything but predictable. Two years ago, Columbus had the second-worst start in NHL history (0-8-0). One year later, they pulled off the second-longest winning streak in the history of the league (16 games), set franchise records for wins and points and jumped from fourth-worst to fourth-best in the standings. It ended with a thud. A five-game bounce from the first round of the playoffs by eventual champion Pittsburgh was a sobering look at how far the Jackets still have to go.

At the same time, the outlook in Columbus has never been brighter. The Blue Jackets wanted to add an electrifying offensive element during the summer, and they found one in winger Artemi Panarin, acquired from Chicago for Brandon Saad. With a dynamic young defense corps and Vezina Trophy winner Sergei Bobrovsky, the Jackets hope to be predictably good this year.

OFFENSE The Blue Jackets ranked sixth in the league in scoring and had some explosive nights at the rink, hanging a 10 spot on Montreal and scoring six-plus goals a handful of times. Cam Atkinson led Columbus in scoring for a second straight year, setting career highs in goals (35) and points (62). Panarin should challenge him for the team scoring lead. The 25-year-old sniper is eighth in points in his two years in the NHL and is heralded as a power play weapon.

Alexander Wennberg (46 assists) and Josh Anderson (17 goals) had breakout years, while Nick Foligno, Brandon Dubinsky and Boone Jenner provided ample secondary scoring. The challenge for the Blue Jackets will be replacing the output of three departed regulars: Sam Gagner, Scott Hartnell and William Karlsson.

DEFENSE Long the sinkhole on the roster, the Jackets' blueline is now one of the best in hockey. Rookie Zach Werenski and Seth Jones combined for 89 points and gave the Blue Jackets a young, dominant top pairing, not to mention two 40-point producers on defense for the first time in franchise history. Jones looks like a future Norris Trophy winner, while Werenski already boasts an unflappable calm usually held by veterans. There's temptation to split them up, but for now they're a brilliant duo.

Jack Johnson and David Savard form a big-bodied, shutdown pair that can log heavy minutes if a lead needs to be protected. Ryan Murray, the No. 2 overall pick in 2012, has slid to the third pair and could be traded. He's getting pushed by Markus Nutivaara and Gabriel Carlsson.

GOALTENDING Bobrovsky won his second Vezina Trophy and finished third in voting for the Hart. He led the NHL with a .931 save percentage and 2.06 goals-against average, but most importantly he pushed aside three years of groin injuries to stay healthy. Look for him to play between 60 and 65 games again. Joonas Korpisalo is the undisputed backup.

SPECIAL TEAMS With Panarin joining the band up front and Werenski a year older on the point, the power play should be special. It was a dominant unit for the first half of the 2016-17 season before cooling off. Expect Wennberg, Atkinson and Foligno on the top unit, leaving Jones, Jenner, Oliver Bjorkstrand and others to anchor a solid second unit. The penalty kill took a hit with the loss of Karlsson in the expansion draft, but the Blue Jackets believe second-year NHLer Lukas Sedlak can step in and fill the void.

ROBBED BY 'BOB' After taking home the award in 2012-13, Sergei Bobrovsky once again snagged the Vezina Trophy last season, leading Columbus to its most successful campaign in franchise history.

INTANGIBLES Tortorella began sounding the alarm only one day after the Blue Jackets were beaten by Pittsburgh: "We haven't accomplished anything yet." He'll be on high alert over the summer and in training camp for any hint of complacency. The tendency in Columbus has been to take a deep breath after a small success. After the organization's previous two playoff berths, they hit rock bottom before climbing back to respectability.

ROOKIES The Jackets took heat at the 2016 draft for picking Pierre-Luc Dubois at No. 3 instead of Jesse Puljujarvi. After sending Dubois back to junior, where he switched from the wing to center halfway through the year, he should be ready to contribute, perhaps in a third-line role. Towering D-man Carlsson was baptized in the playoffs and will push for consistent time on the third pair.

X-FACTOR Bobrovsky is willing to see a sports psychologist, his agent said, in order to overcome his playoff struggles. Bobrovsky has excelled in the Olympics, World Cup and world championships, but he's 3-10 with an .887 save percentage in his NHL playoff career.

THE BRASS The Jackets' triumvirate is working well, with president of hockey operations John Davidson, GM Jarmo Kekalainen and assistant GM Bill Zito. Tortorella enters the final year of his contract and will be looking for a raise.

Future WATCH

1. PIERRE-LUC DUBOIS, C
AGE 19 TEAM Blainville-Boisbriand (QMJHL)
Spent his first full season at center, Dubois may still end up a left winger for Columbus.

2. OLIVER BJORKSTRAND, RW
AGE 22 TEAM Cleveland (AHL)
A new workout program is aimed to help him compete physically at the next level.
ACQUIRED 89th overall, 2013 NHL '17-18

3. VITALY ABRAMOV, RW
AGE 19 TEAM Gatineau (QMJHL)
The 'Meteor Man' is fast and efficient. His aggressive play makes up for his small stature.

4. GABRIEL CARLSSON, D
AGE 20 TEAM Linkoping (Swe.)
Needs to add muscle to his lanky frame. He doesn't contribute much offensively.
ACQUIRED 29th overall, 2015 NHL '18-19

5. SONNY MILANO, LW
AGE 21 TEAM Cleveland (AHL)
Good hands and quick, he's a hit-or-miss project. Needs to learn to play without the puck.
ACQUIRED 16th overall, 2014 NHL '17-18

6. TYLER MOTTE, LW
AGE 22 TEAM Rockford (AHL)
Made Blackhawks out of training camp last fall. Plays a mature, two-way game.
ACQUIRED From Chi, June 2017 NHL '18-19

7. ANDREW PEEKE, D
AGE 19 TEAM Notre Dame (HE)
Not much to talk about offensively, but his 6-foot-2, 200-pound frame has upside on 'D.'
ACQUIRED 34th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

8. PAUL BITTNER, C
AGE 20 TEAM Cleveland (AHL)
At 6-foot-5 and 205 pounds, Bittner needs to kick the injury bug and get more playing time.

9. ALEXANDRE TEXIER, C
AGE 18 TEAM Grenoble (Fra.)
Needs to round out his game while still capitalizing on his speed and playmaking talent.

10. CALVIN THURKAUF, LW
AGE 20 TEAM Kelowna (WHL)
Showed vast improvement in final junior season. Was a leader for the Swiss at WJC.

2017 NO. 1 DRAFT PICK

ALEXANDRE TEXIER

POSITION

SELECTED
45th overall

Grenoble

David Perron

SCOUTING REPORT
As a teenager excelling in France's top league, Texier is a rarity. He has good speed and playmaking ability, but must round out his game. Playing major junior for Baie-Comeau (QMJHL) will help.

Dallas STARS

BY MIKE HEIKA

FACED WITH TOUGH decisions at several key positions, the Dallas Stars showed over and over in the off-season that they are dead set on winning now.

They brought back veteran coach Ken Hitchcock, who guided the franchise to its one and only Stanley Cup title in 1999 and who's most likely getting his last gig as a bench boss. They acquired 30-year-old goalie Ben Bishop to combine with 33-year-old Kari Lehtonen. They added impact forwards Alexander Radulov, 31, and Martin Hanzal, 30, as well as defensive defenseman Marc Methot, 32, to fill key holes.

The moves make a lot of sense on paper and should help the Stars improve some of the worst defensive numbers in the NHL. That's the bottom line for GM Jim Nill. He took over in 2013 vowing to make Dallas a consistent contender, and he has alternated playoff seasons with non-playoff seasons. He wants to start a long-term run. "One in, one out, that just doesn't work," he said. "I believe if you make the playoffs, anything can happen. We need to start making the playoffs every year."

OFFENSE Dallas starts with two of the best forwards in the NHL in Jamie Benn (third in the league over the past four seasons with 324 points) and Tyler Seguin (fifth with 306 points), so the offense should be fine. Adding right winger Radulov as a free agent will give Dallas one of the top lines in the league, but after that trio, depth is an issue.

Nill added center Hanzal to a team that already has Jason Spezza, so that could be an awkward situation that has to be worked out. Hanzal is best suited as a No. 3 center, so Spezza may well anchor the second line.

Among the younger players sprinkled throughout the lineup are Radek Faksa, Brett Ritchie, Mattias Janmark and Devin Shore,

SHOOTING STAR
Jamie Benn is still the top triggerman in 'Big D' but won't be tasked with quite the same burden as last season after GM Jim Nill bolstered the team's scoring depth.

TYLER SEGUIN

all of whom have scored double-digit goals in a season. Hanzal and Radulov will help ease the burden on Seguin and Benn, but the forward group remains top-heavy, and contributions from secondary players will be essential for the Stars to contend.

DEFENSE The blueline was the undoing of last year's team, but it's a pretty talented group. Adding Methot as a solid left-handed defender should balance skilled righties John Klingberg and Julius Honka. Second-year lefty Esa Lindell had a solid rookie season and more is expected from him this year.

Veteran Dan Hamhuis is a solid depth defenseman, but after him the Stars have to sort out the logjam at the bottom with Stephen Johns, Jamie Oleksiak, Patrik Nemeth and Greg Pateryn. The Stars need to lose at least one, maybe even two. Running eight defensemen proved to be disastrous the past two seasons.

GOALTENDING Dallas jumped into the off-season by addressing its greatest need, acquiring Bishop and signing him to a six-year deal. Over the past five seasons, the 6-foot-7 stopper ranks seventh in goalie wins (141) with a 2.29 goals-against average and .920 save percentage. Lehtonen moves into a backup role but should be able to ease Bishop's workload. Dallas ranked last in save percentage last season at .893, and that should be greatly improved.

SPECIAL TEAMS Over the past four seasons, former coach Lindy Ruff's teams have ranked fifth in power play goals but 29th in shorthanded goals against. Some of Nill's off-season maneuvering was aimed at improving a PK that ranked 30th. The power play has the pieces to be good, and Hitchcock said he'll be doing a lot of the coaching there.

INTANGIBLES Hitchcock gets people on board quickly, and he's taking over a team that is motivated to win after last season's colossally disappointing playoff absence. The first month of the season could ultimately dictate whether the Stars flourish or falter.

ROOKIES All eyes will be on Honka. The 21-year-old was drafted 14th overall in 2014 and has already played nearly 200 AHL games. He should be ready for a regular role. Honka is a good skater and a slick playmaker, but he also has an edge to his game and doesn't mind being an agitator. He could have some growing pains or he could be running the No. 1 power play by Christmas.

X-FACTOR The usage of Spezza will be worth watching. Ruff tried him at right wing last year, but the veteran didn't respond well. If Hitchcock does the same thing this season and puts Hanzal at center, it could create some issues.

THE BRASS Nill enters his fifth season as GM and wants to win now. His long-term plans are in good shape, with a solid group of prospects in tow. But he made some big moves during the off-season and needs those moves to pay off immediately.

SCOUTING REPORT

As if the Stars didn't have enough talented young blueliners, now they have Heiskanen, a smooth-skating specimen with plenty of skill and poise. He really stood out for Finland at the world juniors.

Detroit RED WINGS

BY BOB DUFF

AS THEY CLOSED Joe Louis Arena last season, the New Jersey Devils seemed an odd choice for the Red Wings' farewell opponent, but in retrospect, perhaps it was the perfect metaphor of what lies ahead for Detroit.

Like the Devils, the Wings were once a powerhouse envied by all for their Stanley Cup success. But the Devils entered a downward spiral and haven't made the playoffs since 2012, a fate that could be in store for the Wings. Missing the post-season in 2016-17 for the first time since 1989-90, Detroit might have to get used to being outsiders for the immediate future. Entering the state-of-the-art Little Caesars Arena, the Wings are a team in a state of decay. With so many holes to fill, any thought of them making a quick rebound back into the playoff picture would appear to be pure folly.

OFFENSE Everywhere you looked, Detroit's forwards endured a drop-off. Rookie sensation Dylan Larkin slumped from 23 goals to 17, Gustav Nyquist dipped from 17 to 12, Justin Abdelkader fell from 19 to seven, Frans Nielsen from 20 to 17 and Luke Glendening from eight to three. After a career-high 14 goals in 2015-16, Riley Sheahan didn't score until the last game of the season.

Among the few bright spots was a second-half surge by Tomas Tatar that resulted in 25 goals, while captain Henrik Zetterberg led the team with 51 points. The speedy Andreas Athanasiou (18 goals) and 2013 first-round pick Anthony Mantha (17 goals) provided hope for the future. Mike Green, with 14 goals and 36 points, was the only defenseman with more than 13 points.

DEFENSE Free agent addition Trevor Daley's 19 points with Pittsburgh would've ranked him second among Detroit's rearguards in scoring. This is a plodding bunch lacking a legitimate top pairing.

They don't make good first passes, generally can't skate the puck out of trouble and struggle to clear the defensive zone.

Chronic knee issues have crippled Niklas Kronwall, and Jonathan Ericsson is more big lug than his nickname of 'Big Rig.' An injection of youth brought in Xavier Ouellet, Nick Jensen and Ryan Sproul, but none of them made a significant impact. And there's no immediate help on the horizon. Luke Witkowski was added as a UFA for his toughness more than his defensive acumen.

GOALTENDING By the end of the 2015-16 season, Petr Mrazek had usurped Jimmy Howard as the No. 1 goalie, but a dismal season in which Mrazek didn't deliver statistically and proved to be an unsettling presence in the dressing room, with questions about his work ethic and commitment, cost him so much that Detroit left him unprotected in the Vegas expansion draft. INTANGIBLES Detroit likes to talk about the culture they've fostered, but there's definitely a transition underway in the dressing room as Zetterberg and Kronwall near the end of the line. The fact the Wings felt it necessary to bring in veteran Steve Ott last season as a dressing room presence doesn't bode well for the future leadership group and lent credence to speculation that cliques were forming within the team.

ROOKIES GM Ken Holland has stated that at least one or two players from Calder Cup-winning Grand Rapids will make the leap. The best bets are forwards Evgeny Svechnikov and Tyler Bertuzzi. Svechnikov could supply much-needed offense, while Bertuzzi is a bottom-six grinder.

X-FACTOR So many elements must come together for the Red Wings to have any hope at a playoff spot. Their core must stay healthy. Daley needs to be a home run, and Larkin has to rebound big-time from his sophomore slump. All told, it seems like way too much to ask of this team. A lottery draft pick is much more likely.

THE BRASS Holland and coach Jeff Blashill figure to be on short leashes. Holland is in the last year of his deal, while Blashill has two years remaining. The change in ownership structure with the death last year of Mike Ilitch could lead to more changes, with son Chris Ilitch looking to put his own mark on the team.

while, enjoyed a renaissance season, posting a 2.10 goals-against average and .927 save percentage, but injuries limited him to 26 games. Prospect Jared Coreau remains a work in progress.

SPECIAL TEAMS In 2015-16, Detroit's power play was a weapon that helped disguise many of the flaws emerging in this team. That wasn't the case last season, as the power play tumbled, along with the team's fortunes. The Wings went nearly three months from October to January without scoring a power play goal on the road. Detroit's penalty killing was also inconsistent, finishing 16th.

TREND ZETTER
A relic of Detroit's bygone glory years, captain Henrik Zetterberg's honest two-way game and unrivaled work ethic serve as the model for apprenticing Red Wings.

Edmonton OILERS

BY ROBERT TYCHKOWSKI

AFTER A DECADE of misery, failure and lottery picks, the Oilers have emerged – at last – as a Stanley Cup contender. The painful 10-year rebuild finally showed significant progress, with Edmonton making the playoffs for the first time since 2006, finishing the season with 103 points and advancing to the second round.

At the heart of the resurrection, of course, is Connor McDavid, who scored 100 points in his sophomore season, capturing the Art Ross Trophy, Hart Trophy and Ted Lindsay Award. But a strong supporting cast also made a huge impact. Leon Draisaitl established himself as elite, Cam Talbot emerged as a top-tier workhorse goalie, Milan Lucic and Patrick Maroon combined for 50 goals and 463 pounds of much-needed muscle and a blueline that had long been a liability was transformed into a strength. As a result, a team that had been considered a laughingstock for 10 years is now a Cup candidate. The challenge for the Oilers will be not only duplicating a season in which everything went right, but improving on it.

OFFENSE Believe it or not, this might be an issue. Despite having a pair of dominant cornerstones, with McDavid leading the NHL in scoring and Draisaitl finishing eighth, there are still a lot of question marks about where the goals will come from.

Maroon had a career-high 27 goals, but can he duplicate a season in which he doubled his previous best? The cost-saving trade of Jordan Eberle for Ryan Strome represents a significant downgrade on paper (Eberle's career low for goals is better than Strome's career high). To what extent can the former Islanders building block pick up the slack? And there's a lot of youth being expected to contribute offensively – Anton Slepyshev, Jesse Puljujarvi and Drake Caggiula have combined for 140 NHL games. What will they be able to deliver?

LESS FOR MORE
Connor McDavid signed a long-term $100-million pact that will make him the NHL's highest-paid player, but he left money on the table to help Edmonton remain a contender.

DEFENSE Oilers GM Peter Chiarelli shored up what had been a major issue in Edmonton, building a blueline that helped cut the team's goals against from to 27th to eighth. The trade that sent Taylor Hall to New Jersey for Adam Larsson was ridiculed at first, but Larsson was a godsend in his first season in Edmonton. He steadies his own end of the ice with a smart, calm and aggressive presence that the Oilers desperately needed.

Andrej Sekera and Kris Russell also deliver strong, steady minutes, while an injury-free Oscar Klefbom finally blossomed into the top-pairing defenseman the Oilers envisioned when they signed him to a seven-year contract in 2015. Sekera will be sidelined with a knee injury for the first chunk of the regular season, so the defense corps will have its depth tested.

GOALTENDING Talbot answered all doubts last season, playing a league-high 73 games while finishing in the top 10 among starting goalies in save percentage and goals-against average. Finding him some relief was an issue, and Edmonton hopes unproven Laurent Brossoit (14 NHL games) can lighten the load this year.

SPECIAL TEAMS The Oilers' power play contributed a great deal to their success, converting at a fifth-best rate last season (22.9 percent). Giving McDavid and Draisaitl a little extra time and space makes a huge difference and Mark Letestu's one-timer did serious damage. The penalty killing was merely average, and the Oilers lost two key PK forwards in Matt Hendricks and Benoit Pouliot.

INTANGIBLES Chiarelli wanted a culture change in Edmonton and he got it. He's created a grittier team that is much more committed to playing the right way. They've gone from being weaklings in the Pacific Division to one of the biggest and toughest teams in the NHL. Last season provided a sense of confidence that had been missing for a decade. Are the Oilers back? You better believe it – because they certainly do.

ROOKIES Puljujarvi, a right winger with size and game-breaking potential, figures to be the only rookie to make the team this season. The Oilers want the fourth overall pick from the 2016 draft to play a top-six role, but that will be up to him. He had 28 points in 39 AHL games after an early-season demotion last year.

X-FACTOR Nobody on the top two lines or the top two defense pairings missed any significant time to injury last season. The goaltending was spectacular. A handful of players achieved personal bests. Basically, everything went right for the Oilers last year. Edmonton needs fate to smile on them again in 2017-18.

THE BRASS Chiarelli is not afraid to make a big move – as evidenced by the fact high draft picks Hall, Eberle and Nail Yakupov have all been traded away – while coach Todd McLellan has the team playing a more complete and responsible style. The result is an entirely new-look organization.

SCOUTING REPORT
An incredibly skilled offensive player, Yamamoto skates well and thinks the game at a high level. He probably needs to be on a scoring line at the next level, but the Oilers are set up nicely for that.

Florida PANTHERS

BY GEORGE RICHARDS

FEW TEAMS WERE as disappointing as the Panthers last season. After winning a franchise-record 47 games with a franchise-best 103 points and capturing only the second divisional title in team history in 2015-16, management made wholesale changes both on and off the ice and the team responded with a resounding thud. Dale Tallon was pushed aside as Florida's GM in a front office purge, and popular coach Gerard Gallant was unceremoniously fired 22 games in. The Panthers ended up so far out of the playoffs they narrowly escaped last place in the Atlantic Division. Tallon was officially renamed GM the day after the disastrous campaign ended, while interim coach-GM Tom Rowe is still employed by the team but doesn't seem to be around anymore.

Leading goal-scorer Jonathan Marchessault was left unprotected and nabbed by Vegas in the expansion draft, while the team declined to bring back future Hall of Famer Jaromir Jagr. The Panthers are banking on internal improvement and guidance from new coach Bob Boughner to return to respectability.

OFFENSE With the departure of Marchessault, Florida lost its first 30-goal scorer since David Booth in 2008-09. The 45-year-old Jagr (46 points) wasn't offered a contract and Reilly Smith (37 points) was traded to the Golden Knights in exchange for them picking up his cumbersome contract.

A healthy Jonathan Huberdeau, who missed 51 games with an injured Achilles tendon, will help fill the scoring void. With Jagr gone, Huberdeau and Aleksander Barkov will likely be paired with former KHLer Evgeny Dadonov, who signed a three-year deal July 1. The Panthers need a bounce-back performance from Nick Bjugstad (seven goals and 14 points last year) and a continued rise from leading scorer Vincent Trocheck. Free agent addition Radim Vrbata racked up 55 points last season in Arizona, but he'll struggle to duplicate such production in a lesser role.

DEFENSE Last off-season's overhaul saw Keith Yandle, Jason Demers and Mark Pysyk brought aboard. This season, the Panthers' defense corps looks familiar as the top-six returns intact. Aaron Ekblad struggled at times in his third season and vows to regain his elite form. Rookie Michael Matheson was a bright spot and Alex Petrovic continues to improve. Ian McCoshen made his NHL debut late last year and looks ready for a regular role with the Panthers.

Boughner is a defensive coach who likes the speed of Florida's blueline and feels a more aggressive approach will benefit players who struggled last year.

season. Luongo missed the final weeks of last season due to injury concerns stemming from 2016 hip surgery, and Luongo said the problem would likely not go away and he would just have to deal with it. James Reimer may end up carrying the bulk of the starts.

SPECIAL TEAMS Of all the problems the Panthers had last year, their penalty kill wasn't one of them. Led by the likes of captain Derek MacKenzie, Colton Sceviour and Trocheck, Florida had the league's second-best PK. Two big parts of that kill – Smith and the bought-out Jussi Jokinen – are gone. The power play needs work, and Dadonov and Vrbata should help. Yandle earned 16 of his team-high 36 assists while on the man advantage.

INTANGIBLES With the exit of veterans Jagr, Jokinen and Shawn Thornton, Florida has a leadership void to fill. Last season was tumultuous and unstable, and the Panthers need to minimize distractions and get off to a good start to turn the page on last year's debacle.

ROOKIES Not only will 2017 first-round pick Owen Tippett get a shot to make the team, but the Panthers will also look at Henrik Haapala (who led Finland's top league in scoring last season) and former KHL forward Maxim Mamin. Forwards Jayce Hawryluk, Sebastian Repo, Juho Lammikko and Dryden Hunt – as well as blueliner McCoshen – will challenge for playing time.

X-FACTOR A return to stability in the front office will only help the Panthers. As team CEO Matthew Caldwell said during the summer, for a team with such strong military ties, last year's Panthers failed to get its chain of command sorted out.

THE BRASS Tallon is back running things with the help of assistant GM Eric Joyce, newcomer Chris Pronger and Hall of Famer Bill Torrey, among others. Unlike last year, if players have a problem, they can bring their concerns to one guy: Tallon. The Panthers are trying to right the mistakes that led to last year's disappointment.

THE CAT'S MEOW
Left winger Jonathan Huberdeau is a chief offensive facilitator for the Panthers, and his extended absence last season played a big part in Florida's tumble down the standings.

Future WATCH

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. OWEN TIPPETT
AGE 18 TEAM Mississauga (OHL)
Fast, powerful skater with great hands and hard shot. Just needs to improve his defense.
ACQUIRED 10th overall, 2017 NHL '18-19

2. HENRIK BORGSTROM, C
AGE 20 TEAM Denver (NCHC)
Strong skater and terrific hands, he averaged more than point per game as NCAA freshman.
ACQUIRED 23rd overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

3. IAN MCCOSHEN, D
AGE 22 TEAM Springfield (AHL)
Having success against older and more mature players has boosted his confidence.
ACQUIRED 31st overall, 2013 NHL '17-18

4. SAM MONTEMBEAULT, G
AGE 20 TEAM Blainville-Boisbriand (QMJHL)
Overage season in the 'Q' was his best yet. More than ready for the next level.
ACQUIRED 77th overall, 2015 NHL '20-21

5. JAYCE HAWRYLUK, RW
AGE 21 TEAM Springfield (AHL)
After dealing with injuries, he returned to display his gritty, relentless two-way game.
ACQUIRED 32nd overall, 2014 NHL '18-19

6. MICHAEL DOWNING, D
AGE 22 TEAM Springfield (AHL)
Michigan alum surprised everyone with his composed play and competitive drive.
ACQUIRED 97th overall, 2013 NHL '19-20

7. MAXIM MAMIN, LW
AGE 22 TEAM CSKA Moscow (KHL)
Had breakout offensive season in KHL playing alongside Valeri Nichushkin.
ACQUIRED 175th overall, 2016 NHL '18-19

8. ADAM MASCHERIN, LW
AGE 19 TEAM Kitchener (OHL)
What's the undersized goal-scorer going to do after another 35-goal season and 100 points?
ACQUIRED 38th overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

9. ALEKSI HEPONIEMI, C
AGE 18 TEAM Swift Current (WHL)
Gifted playmaker with high hockey IQ aiming for 100 points, but badly needs muscle mass.
ACQUIRED 40th overall, 2017 NHL '20-21

10. JONATHAN ANG, C
AGE 19 TEAM Peterborough (OHL)
A hard worker and swift skater, the challenge is to let the rest of his game get caught up.
ACQUIRED 94th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

OWEN TIPPETT

Right winger

SELECTED
10th overall

Mississauga

Kyle Okposo

SCOUTING REPORT
The physical tools are undeniable. He's a fast, powerful skater, his shot is heavy and his hands are deadly. If he can improve his play away from the puck, he'll be a weapon. Could make NHL at 18.

Los Angeles KINGS

BY DOUG WARD

THE KINGS ARE like one of those lenticular posters, the ones where the image looks altogether different depending upon the perspective from which it is viewed. From one angle, this is an elite franchise with two Stanley Cup championships in the past six years. Viewed a different way, however, Los Angeles is in a free fall after missing the post-season twice in the past three years.

From any perspective, expectations have been raised in L.A., so GM Dean Lombardi and coach Darryl Sutter were both removed from power. The line of succession went through the Hockey Hall of Fame, with former Kings greats Luc Robitaille and Rob Blake installed to restore the organization's regal touch as team president and GM, respectively.

Blake's first move was promoting John Stevens to coach. Stevens will be tasked with moving away from the club's heavy brand of hockey and icing a skilled team that can play at a brisk tempo – all while retaining the team's tough-to-play-against identity. After finishing 28th in shooting percentage, the Kings' dominant puck possession must translate to more goals.

Anze Kopitar slumped in his first season as captain, and Jonathan Quick sat out 59 games with a groin injury, so better fortunes for the pair will help the Kings rebound in 2017-18.

OFFENSE Stevens must find a way to open things up without sacrificing the team's defensive excellence. With the exception of Jeff Carter, who led the way with 32 goals and 66 points, the Kings' best players were part of the problem: Kopitar slipped to a woeful 12 goals and 52 points, Marian Gaborik (who underwent off-season knee surgery) had just 10 goals in 56 games, Tyler Toffoli dropped to 16 goals and Dustin Brown scored 14 times.

Salary cap restrictions meant Mike Cammalleri was the lone significant UFA addition.

KING MAKER
L.A.'s identity begins on the back end with Drew Doughty, whose unshakable poise and ability to drive the play led the Kings to Stanley Cup championships in 2012 and 2014.

JONATHAN QUICK

Drew Doughty followed up his Norris Trophy campaign with 12 goals and 44 points. Wingers Toffoli and Tanner Pearson, both 25, were inked to contract extensions.

DEFENSE The Kings gave up 2.45 goals per game last season, sixth-best in the league, with a dominant Doughty once again anchoring the blueline. Doughty ranked second among NHL defensemen in ice time while averaging a whopping 32.4 shifts per game.

Matt Greene was bought out and Brayden McNabb was lost to Vegas in the expansion draft, but there's ample depth with Alec Martinez as well as the improving Derek Forbort and Kevin Gravel. Jake Muzzin needs a bounce-back year. Up front, the Kings need Kopitar to regain his Selke Trophy-winning form of 2015-16.

GOALTENDING Quick sustained a groin injury on opening night that limited him to 17 games, but he was effective upon his return, posting a pair of shutouts to go with a 2.26 goals-against average and .917 save percentage. After an abbreviated season with no postseason play, Quick should be fresh enough to handle the bulk of the work. With Peter Budaj and Ben Bishop out of the picture, Darcy Kuemper and Jack Campbell will battle for the backup job.

SPECIAL TEAMS L.A. was efficient killing penalties, but unproductive on the power play. Doughty, Muzzin and Martinez are all elite on the PK. First-year assistant coaches Dave Lowry, Pierre Turgeon and Don Nachbaur will be charged with improving the power play, and Doughty (five goals, 19 points on the PP) provides a nice starting point. Toffoli didn't score a shorthanded goal last year, but notched six shorties over the previous two seasons.

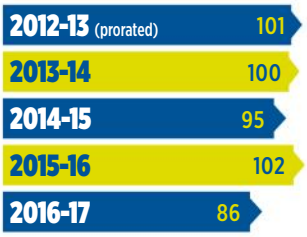
Regular Season Points



INTANGIBLES How the Kings respond to the more even-tempered approach of Stevens after the departure of the hard-driving Sutter will go a long way toward determining if this group's Cup window remains open. Kopitar needs to be more effective as both a player and a leader in his second season as captain.

ROOKIES Forwards Adrian Kempe and Jonny Brodzinski and defenseman Paul LaDue made their NHL debuts last season and all three could see regular ice time in 2017-18. Kempe, a first-round pick in 2014, has the size and speed that could help usher in a new era.

X-FACTOR Quick's opening-night injury set an ominous tone last season, and Gaborik's knee surgery makes the veteran's contract even more of an albatross. Keeping the Kings' veteran core on the ice while easing in younger, faster players might be the most important factor in getting back to the playoffs.

THE BRASS If Blake is to move the Kings into the speed era while being held back by the weighty contracts of Brown, Gaborik and long-departed Mike Richards, the rookie GM will need to be as effective working in a corner office as he was working the corners of the rink.

SCOUTING REPORT
A knock on his skating caused Vilardi to drop out of the top five, but you won't hear the Kings complaining. That's because the Memorial Cup champ has high hockey IQ and deadly stick.

Minnesota WILD

BY MICHAEL RUSSO

COMING OFF A season of franchise milestones including most wins, most points and the second-most goals in the NHL, the Wild could win the Western Conference in 2017-18 and it may not matter to the restless fan base. After many fans bought in last season, the Wild – after amassing the second-most points in the West – bowed out with a single post-season victory. So the Wild will surely enter this season with cynicism in the air, especially after expansion and salary cap challenges led to the loss of Erik Haula, the trades of Jason Pominville, Marco Scandella and prospect Alex Tuch, and the departures of seven others via trade or free agency.

In come Tyler Ennis and Marcus Foligno after GM Chuck Fletcher's fourth trade with Buffalo since 2013. A three-time 20-goal scorer, Ennis is a slippery, skilled winger when he's healthy. However, he has scored only eight goals and missed 90 games over the past two years. The 6-foot-3 Foligno was fifth in the NHL last season with 279 hits and had a career-high 13 goals. Five years since signing Zach Parise and Ryan Suter, the Wild have won two playoff rounds. Expectations loom large.

OFFENSE Minnesota is a fast, balanced team that benefited from coach Bruce Boudreau's system. The Wild had 12 double-digit goal-scorers, four of whom hit the 20-goal mark. Mikael Granlund is coming off a breakout season of 26 goals and 69 points, Nino Niederreiter topped 20 goals for a third straight year, Jason Zucker scored a career-high 22 and Eric Staal enjoyed a 28-goal renaissance.

Several others established personal bests, including center Charlie Coyle (56 points) and defensemen Matt Dumba (11 goals), Jared Spurgeon (38 points) and Jonas Brodin (25 points). Parise needs to bounce back from a 19-goal campaign in which he was plagued by injury and illness.

BIG BREAKOUT
Not only did Mikael Granlund post a career high in points last season, he defied his playmaking reputation by doubling his previous personal best in goals.

DEFENSE The Wild finished with the seventh-best goals-against average in the NHL last season, but they lost Hall of Fame defenseman Scott Stevens behind the bench and will be relying on youngsters Gustav Olofsson and Mike Reilly and veteran journeyman Kyle Quincey to form a reliable third pair.

This is a mobile blueline, but one that lacks grit and size, a concern after losing Scandella, Nate Prosser and Christian Folin. Suter and Spurgeon are minute-munching stalwarts who combined for 78 points last season.

GOALTENDING Devan Dubnyk had a career-high 40 wins. But when the schedule got compacted and Boudreau lost confidence in backup Darcy Kuemper, Dubnyk's workload became onerous and he won three of 13 appearances in the month of March to see his Vezina Trophy hopes vanish. Alex Stalock will get a chance to return to the NHL full-time as a backup, but the Wild had to go with an affordable goalie to challenge him: Niklas Svedberg, the former Bruins depth stopper who spent the past two years in the KHL.

SPECIAL TEAMS Overall, the power play clicked at a franchise-best efficiency last season (21.0 percent). It was great at home (27.4 percent) but abysmal on the road (14.4 percent). Boudreau had a quick trigger finger. If something wasn't working, he wasn't shy to change personnel, bench key players or swap players between units. It'll be interesting to see how the Wild's lack of physicality on the back end hinders a penalty kill that ranked eighth in the league.

INTANGIBLES Captain Mikko Koivu and Staal are coming off their best seasons in years and will have to keep the dressing room settled, after frustration once again seeped in late last season. When struggles emerge, the veterans have to keep the longtime returning core from fracturing. Up until March, Minnesota was one of the NHL's best teams. But the Wild didn't enter the playoffs playing its best hockey, which ultimately proved costly.

ROOKIES After getting a taste of the big leagues in 2016-17, Joel Eriksson Ek should make the team and emerge as a Calder Trophy candidate. The captain of Sweden's world junior team had three goals and seven points in 15 NHL games last season. He's a skilled, smart and reliable player who can play on the wing or down the middle. Center Luke Kunin, drafted 15th overall in 2016, also has a shot at cracking the lineup.

X-FACTOR The team's veterans are solid, but the Wild's ability to go where it wants to largely rests on younger players such as Granlund, Niederreiter, Zucker, Coyle and Dumba. All five players had their best seasons last year and need to build on that surge, not get complacent and slip production-wise.

THE BRASS The pressure is on Fletcher. Minnesota signed a half-dozen minor league lifers because it doesn't have many NHL-ready prospects – in large part due to several traded draft picks, including second-round picks in four of the past five years.

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. JOEL ERIKSSON EK, C
AGE 20 TEAM Farjestad (Swe.)
Returned from development season in Sweden as a more complete player with higher ceiling.
ACQUIRED 20th overall, 2015 NHL '17-18

2. KIRILL KAPRIZOV, LW
AGE 20 TEAM Ufa (KHL)
A standout at the WJC, skilled winger would be a first-rounder in do-over of 2015 draft.

3. LUKE KUNIN, C
AGE 19 TEAM Wisconsin (Big Ten)
Goal-scoring pivot turned pro after sophomore season and didn't miss a beat in AHL stint.
ACQUIRED 15th overall, 2016 NHL '18-19

4. JORDAN GREENWAY, LW
AGE 20 TEAM Boston University (HE)
Stocky power forward is blessed with skill and soft hands. Heading into junior NCAA season.
ACQUIRED 50th overall, 2015 NHL '19-20

5. MIKE REILLY, D
AGE 24 TEAM Iowa (AHL)
Defensive shortcomings keeping him from getting over hump. He's now on the clock.
ACQUIRED Free agent, July 2015 NHL '17-18

6. GUSTAV OLOFSSON, D
AGE 22 TEAM Iowa (AHL)
Smart, mobile D-man, but injuries have plagued his career. Stayed healthy in 2016-17, though.

BY PAT HICKEY

AFTER FINISHING FIRST in the Atlantic Division, the Canadiens lost to the New York Rangers in the first round of the playoffs last season. A lack of offense was the main reason for the ouster, and GM Marc Bergevin set out to add some scoring.

He sacrificed a potential star defenseman by dealing 2016 first-round pick Mikhail Sergachev to Tampa Bay, but the return was dynamic center Jonathan Drouin, who was immediately signed to a six-year deal. Bergevin lost UFA Alexander Radulov to Dallas and was unsuccessful in his bid to trade for a top center after kicking the tires on Colorado's Matt Duchene and Edmonton's Ryan Nugent-Hopkins.

The Canadiens signed UFA defenseman Karl Alzner after losing Alexei Emelin in the Vegas expansion draft and acquired underrated defender David Schlemko from the Golden Knights. Longtime Habs rearguard Andrei Markov headed to the KHL after he and Montreal couldn't agree on a new deal.

OFFENSE Max Pacioretty has the fourth-most goals in the NHL over the past four seasons, and he's done so without a true No. 1 center. Alex Galchenyuk hasn't shown much defensive aptitude, but he remains Montreal's best option to fill the role of top pivot. He and Drouin will get a shot at the position in training camp.

The additions of Drouin and UFA winger Ales Hemsky might make up for the loss of Radulov, but there are still holes down the middle. Look for second-year winger Artturi Lehkonen to raise his production, but it's too much to hope for another career season from Paul Byron. Center Phillip Danault impressed in his first full NHL season, notching 40 points as the Habs' only player to appear in all 82 games, but the 24-year-old needs to fully establish himself with another productive campaign.

DEFENSE The Canadiens didn't have enough top-four blueliners heading into the summer. Shea Weber and Jeff Petry return from last season, but Emelin was lost, Nathan Beaulieu was traded to Buffalo for a third-round pick and Markov wasn't happy with Montreal's contract offer.

Alzner will plug one of the holes, but Bergevin admitted it might be defense by committee. Veteran Mark Streit was brought in, Jordie Benn and Brandon Davidson are back and mobile journeyman Schlemko will also be in the mix. Bergevin insists the team's defense corps is improved, but there's no reason to believe him.

GOALTENDING Carey Price may or may not be the league's best goaltender, but he's being paid like he is. Bergevin ensured his franchise netminder would stay in Montreal by signing him to an eight-year extension worth $10.5 million per season, making him the highest-paid goalie in NHL history. As long as Price stays healthy, the Habs will be in the playoff hunt. Al Montoya returns as the backup and Charlie Lindgren will continue to develop in the AHL.

SPECIAL TEAMS There were high expectations when associate coach Kirk Muller took over the power play last season, but there was only a slight improvement, which could be traced to Weber's 12 power play goals. Three of the top six power play producers – Radulov, Beaulieu and Markov – are gone. The PK was average but improved after Claude Julien replaced Michel Therrien behind the bench and implemented a more aggressive style. Byron's speed gives the Canadiens a dangerous shorthanded threat.

INTANGIBLES Pacioretty grew into the captain's role last season, and he'll be counted on to help Galchenyuk bounce back from an off year. He'll also be asked to mentor Quebec native Drouin, who will face enormous pressure as he transitions from the anonymity of Tampa Bay to the Montreal fishbowl.

ROOKIES Charles Hudon has a chance to crack the lineup up front, but the addition of free agents Hemsky and Peter Holland will make it difficult. Hudon could eclipse Michael McCarron, but McCarron has a huge size advantage and should earn a spot if a summer skating program pays off.

X-FACTOR The 22-year-old Drouin broke out with 53 points last year, but he can't be expected to singlehandedly turn around the offense. If he and Galchenyuk find chemistry and click offensively, the Habs won't be forced to rely on squeaking out victories on the strength of Price's net heroics.

THE BRASS Julien's defense-first style is similar to that of deposed coach Therrien, but he's a better communicator and that will be important in developing Drouin and Galchenyuk into complete players. Bergevin has taken heat for not finding a center, but his job is safe as long as the Canadiens make the playoffs.

CAREY THE LOAD

GM Marc Bergevin failed to land a top center or upgrade the skill level on defense, so the Habs will yet again lean on former Hart Trophy-winning goaltender Carey Price.

AGE 23 TEAM St. John's (AHL)
Sub six-footer has posted consistently good stats in three AHL seasons. Needs another gear.
ACQUIRED 122nd overall, 2012 NHL '18-19

8. MICHAEL MCNIVEN, G
AGE 20 TEAM Owen Sound (OHL)
Late-blooming stopper had career OHL year. Will battle Fucale for ice time in AHL.
ACQUIRED Free agent, 2015 NHL '21-22

9. WILL BITTEN, C
AGE 19 TEAM Hamilton (OHL)
Hardworking pivot with decent hands projected to be two-way player on energy line.
ACQUIRED 70th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

10. VICTOR METE, D
AGE 19 TEAM London (OHL)
Despite a lack of size, he has the skill set to be a shutdown defenseman, using his mobility.
ACQUIRED 100th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

2017 NO. 1 DRAFT PICK

RYAN POEHLING

POSITION

SELECTED
25th overall

St. Cloud State

Ryan O'Reilly

SCOUTING REPORT
Poehling entered college a year early so that he could play with his older twin brothers. It hurt his stats, but it also provided a great challenge for the two-way center who lives on his smarts.

Nashville PREDATORS

BY DAVID BOCLAIR

THE PREDATORS ACCOMPLISHED plenty last season. Perhaps most importantly, they drastically altered the perception of the franchise and its place in the NHL landscape. For the first time, they enter the regular season as a team to beat. Nashville's run to the Stanley Cup final might have been unexpected based on their post-season seeding – the Preds finished eighth in the Western Conference and 16th among playoff teams – but no one can say it was a fluke. And no one needs to wonder whether a non-traditional market will support its team in a notable and meaningful manner.

The 2017-18 Predators won't be much different than the 2016-17 version. They will continue to rely on their aggressive, mobile defense corps and a skilled group of young forwards that has the potential to dominate puck possession and wear down opposing teams. They also once again will play in front of a fervent fan base that was as much a part of the playoff story as the team itself.

OFFENSE Viktor Arvidsson tied with Filip Forsberg for the team lead in goals (31) and with Ryan Johansen for the team lead in points (61) last season. Much of the time those three played together as Nashville's first line. Each will still be 25 or younger when the season starts, which means they're likely to get even better as individuals and as a unit.

Scott Hartnell's return provides the sort of toughness and net-front presence that has been lacking in recent seasons. Someone will have to replace James Neal (77 goals over the past three seasons) as a consistent threat on the second line, and management expects free agent center Nick Bonino to make that unit go.

DEFENSE Nothing was more important when it came to the 2017 expansion draft than making sure the top four blueliners – Roman Josi, P.K. Subban, Mattias Ekholm and Ryan Ellis – were retained. Mission accomplished. Not only that, the third pair of Yannick Weber and Matt Irwin will remain unchanged. Anthony Bitetto remains a useful depth defender and the addition of rugged Alexei Emelin, who was acquired in a trade with Vegas, offers a measure of toughness when needed.

There is some question about Ellis' health for the start of the season. He required surgery to address an injury sustained in Game 5 of the Cup final. There is no doubt, however, that this once again will be one of the league's most mobile and dangerous 'D' units.

GOALTENDING Pekka Rinne's playoff performance, particularly in the first round against Chicago and at times against Pittsburgh, quieted talk that it might be time for change – at least for now. The 6-foot-5 stopper has been Nashville's No. 1 for nearly a decade, but this is the first season that will begin with his eventual successor – Juuse Saros – clearly identified. Saros stepped up in the latter stages of last season to help keep Rinne fresh for the deep playoff run.

SPECIAL TEAMS Only five teams were on the power play more often in 2017-18, so even if the 16th-ranked PP unit was not as good as hoped, it should be noted that Nashville's skating and aggressive approach created ample opportunities. The penalty kill, which was 15th-best, produced a league-high 12 shorthanded goals, including five from Arvidsson, who led the NHL. The Predators' PK unit was significantly better on the road (83.3-percent efficiency) than it was at home (78.5 percent).

ROMAN'S EMPIRE The Predators' vaunted defense corps boasts four world-class players, none more important than Roman Josi, the group's ice-time leader and top point-producer.

INTANGIBLES It is notoriously difficult for a team to rebound in the season following a Cup final runner-up appearance. With a short summer and a target on their back, the journey back to the post-season tournament will be a grind.

ROOKIES Nashville's playoff run featured some unexpected performances from a host of young players, including left winger Pontus Aberg and center Frederick Gaudreau, both of whom remain Calder-eligible. Aberg played 18 games in the playoffs compared to 15 during the regular season, while Gauthier gained notoriety with two game-winning goals in the final.

X-FACTOR How much confidence did this team gain from its playoff performance? For their entire history, the Predators have felt and acted like a team that is a little brother to a division rival (first Detroit, then Chicago) and others. Now Nashville can tell other teams to take their best shot.

THE BRASS After 34 years as an NHL GM, David Poile no longer has to wonder whether he'll ever guide a team to the Stanley Cup final. As one of four coaches to take three different teams to the final, Peter Laviolette probably figures it won't be long until he makes it back.

Future WATCH

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. DANTE FABBRO, D
AGE 19 TEAM Boston University (HE)
Put up decent numbers as a college freshman, but he projects more as a shutdown defender.
ACQUIRED 17th overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

2. EELI TOLVANEN, RW
AGE 18 TEAM Sioux City (USHL)
Amazing shot with a quick release, very shifty and can get into the scoring areas.
ACQUIRED 30th overall, 2017 NHL '20-21

3. VLADISLAV KAMENEV, LW
AGE 21 TEAM Milwaukee (AHL)
Smooth-skating playmaker ramping up production. Had brief two-game NHL audition.
ACQUIRED 42nd overall, 2016 NHL '17-18

4. SAMUEL GIRARD, D
AGE 19 TEAM Shawinigan (QMJHL)
Deft playmaking skills from the blueline make him a focal point of his team's offense.
ACQUIRED 47th overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

5. YAKOV TRENIN, C
AGE 20 TEAM Gatineau (QMJHL)
Assertive power forward posted three seasons in 'Q' with 60-plus points. Eager for next test.
ACQUIRED 55th overall, 2015 NHL '18-19

6. GRANT MISMASH, C
AGE 18 TEAM USA U18 (USHL)
In-your-face pivot who can play physically, but he needs to bulk up. Bound for North Dakota.
ACQUIRED 61st overall, 2017 NHL '21-22

7. PATRICK HARPER, C
AGE 19 TEAM Boston University (HE)
It's all about offensive production for skilled flyweight as he heads into sophomore season.
ACQUIRED 138th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

8. ALEXANDRE CARRIER, D
AGE 20 TEAM Milwaukee (AHL)
Crafty, creative rearguard can makes things happen. Had great rookie AHL season.
ACQUIRED 115th overall, 2015 NHL '19-20

9. JACK DOUGHERTY, D
AGE 21 TEAM Milwaukee (AHL)
Offensive defenseman with a quick release. Needs to work on strength and mobility.
ACQUIRED 51st overall, 2014 NHL '18-19

10. TOM NOVAK, C
AGE 20 TEAM Minnesota (Big Ten)
Showed promise coming off his freshman year, but an injury cut his sophomore season short.
ACQUIRED 85th overall, 2015 NHL '20-21

New Jersey DEVILS

BY ANDREW GROSS

LUCK AND GOOD fortune have been mainly absent from the Devils' universe since their surprising run to the 2012 Stanley Cup final. The hard times continued last season – the second in GM Ray Shero and coach John Hynes' rebuild – as they missed the playoffs for a fifth straight year and finished last in the Eastern Conference. But then, with an 8.5-percent chance of winning the draft lottery, the Devils leapfrogged into the No. 1 slot, a needed jolt for the franchise, which ultimately selected dynamic center Nico Hischier. Still, Hischier is not projected to be a generational talent like recent No. 1 picks Connor McDavid and Auston Matthews.

And even with his selection and the acquisition of top-six forward Marcus Johansson from the Washington Capitals, the Devils' rebuild still has a long way to go.

OFFENSE Two seasons ago, the Devils scored the fewest goals in the NHL. Last season, they had the fewest in the East. Johansson, whose career-high 58 points would've led the team, can only help, as Shero traded for a top-six winger for the third straight summer after previously adding Kyle Palmieri and Taylor Hall. Even with Johansson, the Devils remain thin up front. And depth is a question despite Hischier and fellow prospects Michael McLeod (12th overall in 2016 draft), Blake Speers and John Quenneville pushing for jobs.

Hynes wants more pace in the Devils' game – the given explanation for buying out veteran winger Michael Cammalleri – and, for that, he needs more help from the back end. The defensemen combined for 30 goals last season, 10 more than the previous year.

DEFENSE If depth is an issue up front, it's a crisis on the back end. Team captain Andy Greene, who turns 35 in October, remains the No. 1 defenseman, but a steady top-pair partner has not been found since Adam Larsson was shipped to the Oilers for Hall prior to 2016-17. Damon Severson, 23, had a career-high 31 points but struggled defensively. Likewise, John Moore, with a career-high 12 goals and 22 points, had his defensive issues.

OFF THE SCHNEID
New Jersey needs franchise cornerstone Cory Schneider to return to form after a forgettable 2016-17 season that saw his numbers plummet along with the Devils' fortunes.

The Devils, needing a right-handed shot, went hard after free agent Kevin Shattenkirk, who opted for his hometown New York Rangers. Steven Santini had a solid rookie season, but there is a lack of defense prospects ready to compete for a spot. Losing 25-year-old Jon Merrill in the expansion draft may hurt.

GOALTENDING No. 1 Cory Schneider, stellar the season previous, struggled through an inconsistent 2016-17, going 20-27-11 with an inflated 2.82 goals-against average and subpar .908 save percentage. The Devils have no chance at improving if Schneider can't rebound. By the end of last season, he and Keith Kinkaid were rotating on a game-by-game basis. Kinkaid, playing a career-high 26 contests, went 8-13-3 with a 2.64 GAA and .916 SP, but he has not yet shown he's ready to be a No. 1.

SPECIAL TEAMS The club's offensive and defensive woes were reflected in special teams. The power play ranked 22nd, while the penalty kill allowed a league-high 12 shorthanded goals and ranked 23rd. Signing center Brian Boyle should improve the PK, but the Devils failed to acquire a quarterback for the power play. Palmieri scored eight of his 26 goals on the PP, while Hall converted seven of his 20 goals on the man advantage. Hischier might help, but little improvement can be counted on without a threat from the point.

INTANGIBLES The coaching staff is looking for Hall to take a bigger leadership role in his second season with the team. His experience of being a No. 1 overall pick can help Hischier's transition to the NHL, and Hall's experience of overcoming the shock of being traded after spending his first six NHL seasons in Edmonton can help Johansson, who was dealt for the first time after spending seven seasons in Washington.

ROOKIES Prospects McLeod, Quenneville (drafted 30th in 2014), Speers (67th in 2015) and Nathan Bastian (41st overall in 2016) will compete for spots up front. On 'D,' undrafted free agent Michael Kapla played five games after finishing at UMass-Lowell.

X-FACTOR It's a simple equation for the Devils: if Schneider plays better, the team will improve. If 20-year-old sophomore center Pavel Zacha takes a leap forward, that will also be a huge boost for the club. Another best-case scenario: Hischier proves he can be a dynamic top-line talent alongside Hall.

THE BRASS Both Shero and Hynes have preached this is not an easy rebuild that can be done with shortcuts. Shero stayed true to that by eschewing longer-term free agent signings that he considers band-aids. Hynes has shown he can work with younger players. He may need to show he can win soon.

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. NICO HISCHIER, C
AGE 18 TEAM Halifax (QMJHL)
Natural leader rates off the charts in hockey IQ, and he's a world-class stickhandler.
ACQUIRED 1st overall, 2017 NHL '17-18

2. MICHAEL McLEOD, C
AGE 19 TEAM Mississauga (OHL)
His competitive nature and work ethic mesh well with his speed and offensive skills.
ACQUIRED 12th overall, 2016 NHL '18-19

3. MIRCO MUELLER, D
AGE 22 TEAM Albany (AHL)
Well seasoned former Sharks prospect is a ready-to-step-in defensive gem.
ACQUIRED From SJ, June 2017 NHL '17-18

4. JESPER BOQVIST, RW
AGE 18 TEAM Brynas Jr. (Swe.)
Slick skater has promising offensive instincts. Needs to grow physically.
ACQUIRED 36th overall, 2017 NHL '21-22

5. JOHN QUENNEVILLE, C
AGE 21 TEAM Albany (AHL)
With an AHL All-Star Game nod and a 14-game NHL recall, his confidence level soared.
ACQUIRED 30th overall, 2014 NHL '17-18

6. JOEY ANDERSON, RW
AGE 19 TEAM Minnesota-Duluth (NCHC)
Not flashy, but freshman showed good hockey sense that led to more time on the PP and PK.
ACQUIRED 73rd overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

7. BLAKE SPEERS, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Sault Ste. Marie (OHL)
Made Devils at 19, but in ultimate return to junior he showed great growth and maturity.
ACQUIRED 67th overall, 2015 NHL '18-19

8. NATHAN BASTIAN, RW
AGE 19 TEAM Mississauga (OHL)
Well-built power forward needs increased foot speed at next level. Production flatlined in OHL.
ACQUIRED 41st overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

9. MACKENZIE BLACKWOOD, G
AGE 20 TEAM Albany (AHL)
Shared the crease in rookie pro season, but he stole the No. 1 job with strong playoff showing.
ACQUIRED 42nd overall, 2015 NHL '20-21

10. BRANDON GIGNAC, C
AGE 19 TEAM Shawinigan (QMJHL)
Fearless for a player of his small frame. He needs to get to the harder areas more often.
ACQUIRED 80th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

SCOUTING REPORT
The most exciting thing about Hischier is that we've only seen one year of his work. A dynamic and creative center, he excels in high-pressure situations and can put a team on his back (see: world juniors).

New York ISLANDERS

BY MICHAEL WILLHOFT

THE ISLANDERS TOOK a step backward last season, slogging through a disappointing campaign following the franchise's first playoff series win in 23 years. The club fired coach Jack Capuano halfway through the season, finished fifth in the Metropolitan Division and missed the playoffs by a single point.

It's post-season or bust this time around, and the expectation is that the Islanders will return to the run-and-gun style of play that served them well in 2014-15 but has gone missing over the past couple of seasons. Core players Travis Hamonic and Ryan Strome, both drafted and developed by the Isles, were shipped to the Western Conference in off-season trades that netted top-line right winger Jordan Eberle and draft picks.

The twin specters of franchise center John Tavares' impending free agency and a potential arena lease opt-out by Barclays Center or Islanders ownership hang over the team. Unfortunately for fans, neither issue seems like it will resolve quickly.

OFFENSE Tavares led the team in scoring last season with 66 points despite missing the final five games of the regular season due to injury, while Nick Leddy's 46 points were the most among defensemen. Anders Lee scored a team-high 34 goals and Josh Bailey posted career-high totals in assists (43) and points (56) to lend secondary scoring support.

Big-name free agent signing Andrew Ladd was underwhelming in his first season, recording just 31 points after averaging 54 points in each of his previous three seasons. New York needs a stronger performance from Ladd to justify his seven-year, $38.5-million contract, especially with unproven second-year forwards Anthony Beauvillier and Josh Ho-Sang expected to log heavy minutes up front.

DEFENSE Islanders defensemen know they're expected to join the rush and get pucks to the net, and that was reflected in last season's point totals from the blueline. New York had five defensemen who scored at least 20 points, tops in the NHL: Leddy (46), Calvin de Haan (25), Johnny Boychuk (23), Dennis Seidenberg (22) and Thomas Hickey (20). That type of balanced production on the back end is indicative of the coaching staff's focus on generating offense from the defense corps.

With Hamonic gone, there's a spot open for right-handed defenseman Ryan Pulock (drafted 15th overall in 2013), which should increase the offensive potential of the group.

GOALTENDING Jaroslav Halak and Thomas Greiss will man the crease for the Islanders following the conclusion of the confusing three-goalie experiment. (Third-string netminder Jean-Francois Berube was selected by Vegas in June's expansion draft and then signed with the Chicago Blackhawks as a UFA.) Both Halak and Greiss are solid, experienced netminders who are pushing for the No. 1 job, a competition that should serve the team well this year.

SPECIAL TEAMS The Islanders' power play is the area of greatest concern after finishing near the bottom of the league last year. The hope is the addition of Pulock's booming slapshot from the point will spread things out and lead to more goals on the man advantage. Newcomer Eberle is an intriguing wild card on the PP. On the penalty kill, New York will continue to use a puck-pressure strategy that relies on a quick skater up high.

OFF THE ISLAND?
Unless John Tavares signs a contract extension, the talk surrounding the Isles this season will focus on the impending free agency status of the 27-year-old franchise center.

INTANGIBLES With Doug Weight's promotion to coach – he'll also keep his title as assistant GM – it will be interesting to see how much the Islanders' style of play changes from past seasons. If the club's 24-12-4 record under Weight in the second half of last season is any indicator, his coaching style fits this group.

ROOKIES Center Mathew Barzal is coming off a WHL championship – as well as being named the WHL's Western Conference player of the year and playoff MVP – and is poised to make the jump to full-time NHLer. Drafted 16th overall in 2015, he had 79 points in 41 games with Seattle last season.

X-FACTOR Ho-Sang must emerge as a bona fide point producer if New York is going to accomplish its goal of making it back to the post-season. Ho-Sang has 50-point talent, and the Islanders need to see that skill on display nightly.

THE BRASS Garth Snow remains president and GM of the club under second-year majority owners Jon Ledecky and Scott Malkin. Although ownership strongly considered overhauling hockey operations last season – going so far as to talk to agents and other GMs about the role of team president – Snow is still the guy in charge.

2017 NO. 1 DRAFT PICK

ROBIN SALO

POSITION
Defenseman

SELECTED
46th overall

Jonas Brodin

SCOUTING REPORT
Salo's big selling points are that he's mature and can skate well. He played against men in Finland for most of the past two seasons, with decent results. The only question involves his ceiling – how high is it?

New York RANGERS

BY STEVE ZIPAY

IN THE SHORT tenure of Jeff Gorton as Rangers GM, changing on the fly has been the strategy. Since he officially replaced Glen Sather in July 2015, Gorton hasn't been hesitant to swing short-term deals, get younger and stay competitive. Only about 10 players from that season's opening-night roster remain.

So, change was inevitable after the Rangers looked stale in the 2017 playoffs and bowed out against Ottawa in the second round. Veteran ironman defenseman Dan Girardi was bought out; Derek Stepan, who spent seven seasons in New York as a top center with a long-term deal, was traded to Arizona along with steady backup goalie Antti Raanta; and, the prize of the free agency market, Kevin Shattenkirk, a native of nearby New Rochelle, N.Y., accepted a discounted deal in order to play at home. Another indicator of the philosophical shift: the Rangers had two first-round draft picks for the first time since 2004, selecting well-rounded centers Lias Andersson (seventh) and Filip Chytil (21st).

OFFENSE Thanks to a strong start, the speedy Blueshirts finished fourth in the league in goals, with production spread over the top three lines. Chris Kreider, Rick Nash, J.T. Miller and Michael Grabner scored 20-plus goals apiece, but no Rangers player reached 60 points. The club believes Mika Zibanejad, the presumptive No. 1 center, can replace the 17 goals and 55 points that Stepan leaves behind. Mats Zuccarello (59 points) brought his game almost every night. But the young guns – Kevin Hayes, Jimmy Vesey, Pavel Buchnevich – need to continue developing.

Nick Holden was a surprise, leading Rangers defensemen with 11 goals, but Ryan McDonagh had just six and Brady Skjei had five. Shattenkirk, 28, should provide a major boost. Only six defensemen have averaged more points per game over the past three seasons.

DEFENSE Coach Alain Vigneault insists on a quick north-south system that faltered at times. Shattenkirk's arrival and the four-year extension for Brendan Smith, acquired from Detroit at the trade deadline, solidifies the top four, along with McDonagh and the maturing Skjei, who was voted to the NHL's all-rookie team.

Marc Staal and Holden will compete for third-pair roles with righty Anthony DeAngelo, 21, who came in the Arizona trade; Neal Pionk, 22, a sought-after free agent out of the NCAA; and 6-foot-4 Russian prospect Alexei Bereglazov, 23, a shutdown type who played three seasons in the KHL.

GOALTENDING Ideally, Henrik Lundqvist will start 60-plus games and be rested for the playoffs. Last season, he was limited to 57 appearances and struggled at times, posting the lowest save percentage (.910) and highest goals-against average (2.74) of his glittering career. On some nights, his reflexes and positioning were off. But with an extended summer break (no World Cup), he's expected to rebound. The experienced Ondrej Pavelec arrives as the backup.

SPECIAL TEAMS Shattenkirk is being counted on to quarterback the power play, which struggled mightily in the playoffs. He has had at least 25 PP points in four consecutive seasons. The last Rangers defenseman to do so was Brian Leetch, one of Shattenkirk's idols, with 26 in 2001-02. Shorthanded, New York tied for 19th in the league with an underwhelming 79.8-percent penalty-killing efficiency.

ROYAL REGRESS
The Blueshirts made the playoffs but 'King Henrik' didn't play up to his usual level of excellence in 2016-17, posting the worst numbers in his 12 seasons on Broadway.

Skjei may see more time on the PK and center David Desharnais will help. Grabner and Jesper Fast remain reliable.

INTANGIBLES The early schedule is favorable, like last season, when the Blueshirts built a cushion for the inevitable slowdown in a long season. They play 10 of their first 13 games at Madison Square Garden.

ROOKIES Unlike last season, when freshmen Skjei, Vesey and Buchnevich earned spots, it's questionable whether any first-timer makes the team. Keep an eye on Andersson, a smart and skilled all-around pivot who will get a long look in camp. On defense, Pionk and Bereglazov are next in line.

X-FACTOR At 35, Lundqvist needs to rebound from what was a disappointing season, and it's uncertain whether Pavelec can adequately replace former backup Raanta. Can Shattenkirk spark the power play and the north-south offense? Can Zibanejad, replacing No. 1 center Stepan, put up 60 points?

THE BRASS Owner James Dolan was busy with the NBA's flailing Knicks as Gorton made smaller headlines with continued retooling and a bit of a shakeup. After a year on Vigneault's staff, former AHL assistant coach Jeff Beukeboom was moved to a scouting job, and longtime NHL coach Lindy Ruff was brought in to run the defense. Assistant GM Chris Drury, gaining some power, was named GM of AHL Hartford.

Ottawa SENATORS

BY BRUCE GARRIOCH

THE SENATORS WENT above and beyond expectations last season. Now, what do they do for an encore? After advancing to the Eastern Conference final for the first time in a decade before dropping a 3-2 double overtime decision to Stanley Cup-champion Pittsburgh in Game 7, Ottawa won't take anyone by surprise.

In their first year under coach Guy Boucher, the Senators bought into the program and overcame their share of adversity to have a season not many will soon forget. GM Pierre Dorion, who did an exhaustive coaching search before settling on Boucher, declared his steadfast belief in the Senators by telling anybody who would listen that this team was a contender and the goal in the summer was simply to minimize the changes. Dorion believes if all goes well, the Sens will find a way to take the next step.

OFFENSE The Senators relied on Boucher's system and that attitude won't change in 2017-18. There's no question Erik Karlsson is the straw that stirs the drink, but the Sens have plenty of firepower up front. Center Kyle Turris, who had 27 goals and 55 points last season, doesn't get nearly enough credit for what he brings to the table, while sharpshooter Mike Hoffman was second on the team in goals with 26.

Ottawa needs more consistency from its top-six forwards. Mark Stone was virtually non-existent in the playoffs while Bobby Ryan and Derick Brassard both turned around their difficult years by stepping up in the post-season. After missing nearly two full seasons due to concussion issues, left winger Clarke MacArthur is healthy and could bring more goals.

DEFENSE The departure of Marc Methot as part of the expansion process – the physical defender was selected by Vegas and then traded to Dallas – raises the question of who will play alongside Karlsson.

It could be done by committee. Veteran blueliner Dion Phaneuf, who has played mostly with Cody Ceci since arriving in Ottawa, will get a chance, as will UFA signing Johnny Oduya. Rookie Thomas Chabot will get a look in training camp as well. Karlsson played with Fredrik Claesson when Methot was injured last season. For a while it may be a game of musical chairs.

CRAIG ANDERSON

GOALTENDING Craig Anderson had the kind of season they make movies about. With his wife, Nicholle, battling a rare form of throat cancer, Anderson – who won the Masterton Trophy for perseverance and dedication – brought his focus to the rink every night and played a huge role in the club's success. The 36-year-old Anderson, who left the team for two months to be with Nicholle, finished with a 2.28 goals-against average and a .926 save percentage. Backup Mike Condon did a solid job filling in during Anderson's absence and signed a three-year, $7.2-million deal in the off-season. At some point, perhaps as soon as this season, Condon is expected to take over the No. 1 job.

SPECIAL TEAMS Boucher is supposed to be a power play expert, but the Senators ranked 23rd last season. It was even worse in the playoffs, where Ottawa ranked 14th out of 16 teams. For a team that has Karlsson running the show from the back end, it was tough to watch. The PK wasn't much better, finishing 22nd overall.

RED ROVER
Part of what makes Erik Karlsson a generational talent is his ability to act as a de facto fourth forward without compromising his duties in the defensive end.

There's no new personnel to help out, so players must step up or the system must change.

INTANGIBLES It'll be interesting to see where Phaneuf stands once training camp gets underway. He had every right to refuse to waive his no-movement clause and not be exposed in the expansion draft, but the Senators lost Methot as a result. Dorion confirmed he listened to offers on Phaneuf. An alternate captain, Phaneuf plays a big role on the team and some fences may have to be mended.

ROOKIES All eyes will be on Chabot. He made the team out of training camp last year but only suited up for one game before being sent back to junior. He was excellent at the world juniors for Team Canada and helped lead the QMJHL's Saint John Sea Dogs to a QMJHL title. He could play on one of the Sens' top two defense pairings this season.

X-FACTOR Will Boucher's system and the club's superb netminding hold up for a Senators squad that was the only team to qualify for the post-season with a negative goal differential? Brassard, an integral part of the forward group, had off-season shoulder surgery and may not be ready to start the year.

THE BRASS Owner Eugene Melnyk expects the Senators to make the playoffs every spring and that's not going to change this year. Dorion, heading into his second season as GM, helped the team by adding at the trade deadline, but he had a quiet summer.

Future WATCH

1. THOMAS CHABOT, D
AGE 20 TEAM Saint John (QMHJL)
Chabot won MVP playing for Canada at the WJC and elevates his game under pressure.
ACQUIRED 18th overall, 2015 NHL '17-18

2. COLIN WHITE, C
AGE 20 TEAM Boston College (HE)
His stats sagged as NCAA sophomore, but he looked sharp in six pro games afterward.
ACQUIRED 21st overall, 2015 NHL '17-18

3. LOGAN BROWN, C
AGE 19 TEAM Windsor (OHL)
Towering center was limited to 35 games due to injuries. Capped season with Memorial Cup.
ACQUIRED 11th overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

4. SHANE BOWERS, C
AGE 18 TEAM Waterloo (USHL)
Competitive goal-scorer plays 200-foot game. Good hockey sense but not explosive.
ACQUIRED 28th overall, 2017 NHL '21-22

5. NICK PAUL, LW
AGE 22 TEAM Binghamton (AHL)
Big-bodied power forward showed improved production. Best suited for fourth line.
ACQUIRED 101st overall, 2013 NHL '18-19

6. FILIP CHLAPIK, C
AGE 20 TEAM Charlottetown (QMJHL)
Rangy forward rebounded from dismal 2015-16 to post another 30-plus goal season.
ACQUIRED 48th overall, 2015 NHL '19-20

7. ALEX FORMENTON, LW
AGE 18 TEAM London (OHL)
Powerful skater has sandpaper in his game, but he needs to fill out. Bottom-six energy guy.
ACQUIRED 47th overall, 2017 NHL '21-22

8. ANDREAS ENGLUND, D
AGE 21 TEAM Binghamton (AHL)
A tough blueliner who isn't afraid to drop the gloves. Very limited offensive upside.
ACQUIRED 40th overall, 2014 NHL '18-19

9. FRANCIS PERRON, LW
AGE 21 TEAM Binghamton (AHL)
Rookie pro season was a real eye-opener for crafty former 108-point junior scorer.
ACQUIRED 190th overall, 2014 NHL '19-20

10. FILIP AHL, LW
AGE 20 TEAM Regina (WHL)
Rookie WHL season at 19 was a learning experience. Needs to be more competitive.
ACQUIRED 109th overall, 2015 NHL '20-21

Philadelphia FLYERS

BY WAYNE FISH

IT'S NOT EASY to win 10 games in a row, but it's even harder to win 10 in a row and then not make the playoffs. In fact, before the 2016-17 Flyers did it, no NHL team had achieved that dubious distinction in, oh, 99 years, to be exact. So, consistency is the goal in 2017-18. Because the Flyers missed post-season play and now risk doing so in back-to-back seasons for the first time since the early '90s, the pressure is on, both internally and externally.

The Flyers' off-season moves were not headliners, mainly because the team is expecting an influx of talented rookies. Optimism is cautiously high, especially if No. 2 overall draft pick Nolan Patrick makes the roster. Former starting goalie Steve Mason left for Winnipeg via free agency, replaced by UFA signee Brian Elliott. If the Flyers' rookie class is half as good as last year's (Ivan Provorov, Travis Konecny, Jordan Weal), the team should be in pretty good shape.

OFFENSE Jakub Voracek led the club in scoring, with Claude Giroux finishing second (and failing to lead the Flyers in points for only the second time since 2010). Shayne Gostisbehere had the most points from the defensemen for the second straight season. Philadelphia was minus-19 in goals for/against, so they need better 5-on-5 play, more puck possession time and consistent goaltending.

The Flyers have a good nucleus of veteran forwards (Giroux, Voracek, Wayne Simmonds, Sean Couturier) but the fact is, this team hasn't made it past the second round of the playoffs since 2010. Leadership is starting to come into question. A full season out of Weal and a bounce-back season from Jori Lehtera should help make up for the trade of Brayden Schenn to St. Louis. Coach Dave Hakstol is a big believer in structured play, willing to sacrifice wide-open offense for close-checking, low-scoring games.

THE SHEPHERD
Entering his sixth season as Flyers captain, Claude Giroux will once again be tasked with integrating a crop of green youngsters into the orange-and-black way of life.

DEFENSE The Flyers' team defense was average at best, although Couturier has developed into one of the league's best two-way centers. When he's under control, Radko Gudas can be as intimidating as any defenseman in the league. The 20-year-old Provorov is the key to the overall defense. He was the first rookie in franchise history to lead the team in ice time, averaging nearly 22 minutes per game. If he's paired with Gudas or Brandon Manning, that will be the team's shutdown pair.

At least one and possibly two rookies from a quartet of Philippe Myers, Samuel Morin, Robert Hagg and Travis Sanheim are expected to make the roster. The Flyers were outscored 85-70 in the third period last season, so closing out games better is a high priority.

GOALTENDING It appears the Flyers will try a 50-50 goalie tandem system for the first time in a while, with Elliott and the oft-injured Michal Neuvirth sharing duties. The Flyers are hoping Elliott can regain the excellence he exhibited in St. Louis and leave behind his inconsistent stint in Calgary. Neuvirth will be tasked with a heavier workload than last year. He missed 23 games mid-season with a knee injury, then played in only four of the team's final 20 contests.

SPECIAL TEAMS While the power play was respectable, it wasn't good enough to save assistant coach Joe Mullen's job. And it wasn't good enough to save Schenn, the NHL's leading power play goal-scorer, from being traded. Although Simmonds, Voracek, Giroux and Gostisbehere will still be the mainstays with the man advantage, the PP will look different. Assistant coach Ian Laperriere oversees a penalty-killing unit that finished a disappointing 21st in the NHL. Couturier remains the key to the Flyers' PK efforts.

INTANGIBLES As Voracek echoed at the end of last season, the Flyers' core leadership group needs to start producing or it might get broken up (see Schenn). Giroux enters his sixth season as captain, joining Eric Lindros as the second-longest serving captain in Flyers history, trailing only Bobby Clarke.

ROOKIES Beyond Patrick, Oskar Lindblom and Mike Vecchione are the only rookie forwards viewed as having a legitimate shot to make the team. Myers, Morin, Hagg and Sanheim all have a chance to play meaningful roles on the blueline.

X-FACTOR Giroux and Gostisbehere both underwent the same hip and abdominal surgery during the summer of 2016 and both experienced erratic seasons in 2016-17. If they come into camp completely healthy, look for them to have big years and the Flyers to get back on track.

THE BRASS Ron Hextall enters his fourth season as GM and Hakstol his third as coach. Getting the No. 2 draft pick in Patrick will help the Flyers' build-from-within approach, with which, by the way, owner Comcast Spectacor says it's in agreement.

Future WATCH

1. NOLAN PATRICK, C
AGE 18 TEAM Brandon (WHL)
Big, strong, two-way center oozes hockey sense. Has high-end skill and smarts.
ACQUIRED 2nd overall, 2017 NHL '17-18

2. TRAVIS SANHEIM, D
AGE 21 TEAM Lehigh Valley (AHL)
Was a leader of the Phantoms' defense. Well-rounded game and he even beefed up.
ACQUIRED 17th overall, 2014 NHL '17-18

3. PHILIPPE MYERS, D
AGE 20 TEAM Rouyn-Noranda (QMJHL)
Smart, rangy late-bloomer made immense strides past two years. Needs to get stronger.
ACQUIRED Free agent, 2015 NHL '19-20

4. GERMAN RUBTSOV, C
AGE 19 TEAM Chicoutimi (QMJHL)
Needs to work on his strength, but playing on smaller rinks will help improve his overall game.
ACQUIRED 22nd overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

5. FELIX SANDSTROM, G
AGE 20 TEAM Brynas (Swe.)
For second straight year he shared the Brynas crease with a veteran and his numbers lagged.
ACQUIRED 70th overall, 2015 NHL '20-21

6. SAMUEL MORIN, D
AGE 22 TEAM Lehigh Valley (AHL)
Mammoth defensive rock is an intimidating force. No issues with his skating, though.
ACQUIRED 11th overall, 2013 NHL '17-18

7. ROBERT HAGG, D
AGE 22 TEAM Lehigh Valley (AHL)
Stay-at-home AHL veteran becoming more assertive on a promising blueline.
ACQUIRED 41st overall, 2013 NHL '18-19

8. OSKAR LINDBLOM, LW
AGE 21 TEAM Brynas (Swe.)
Skilled finisher had a breakthrough season. Only issue is his mediocre skating.
ACQUIRED 138th overall, 2014 NHL '18-19

9. CARTER HART, G
AGE 19 TEAM Everett (WHL)
Canada's goalie at WJC, Hart has a mature game with good lateral movement.
ACQUIRED 48th overall, 2016 NHL '21-22

10. ANTHONY STOLARZ, G
AGE 23 TEAM Lehigh Valley (AHL)
Ready to advance to next level but the permanent opportunities keep eluding him.

SCOUTING REPORT
Wracked by injuries for the past year-and-a-half, Patrick still has a ton of upside thanks to his size, skill and ability to drive the middle lane. He's also very responsible and has NHL bloodlines.

Pittsburgh PENGUINS

BY SHELLY ANDERSON

IT ONLY TOOK until parade day for someone official – coach Mike Sullivan certainly qualifies – to utter the word "three-peat."

After becoming the only team to win back-to-back Stanley Cups in the salary cap era and the first since the Detroit in 1997 and '98, the Penguins were almost immediately thinking about winning it again in 2018. The 2017 title was quite a feat, considering the grind the players went through in the previous 12 months (including the World Cup of Hockey for some) and the injuries to key players. Most significantly, the Penguins went all four playoff rounds without top D-man Kris Letang because of neck disc surgery.

Pittsburgh had a few sizable advantages – a team that was almost completely intact from 2016 and cornerstone centers Sidney Crosby and Evgeni Malkin. This time around, there is more turnover throughout the lineup. But the core of stars remains in place, making them once again the team to beat.

OFFENSE Crosby, the Rocket Richard Trophy winner with 44 goals, Malkin and Phil Kessel combined to average 3.3 points per game in the regular season and 3.2 in the post-season. Also returning are Jake Guentzel, who as a rookie developed chemistry with Crosby and led the playoffs with 13 goals, and Conor Sheary, who slumped in the playoffs but has shown a scoring knack. On top of that, there's feisty winger Patric Hornqvist, clutch scorer Bryan Rust and speedster Carl Hagelin as well as the skill of Letang and Justin Schultz on the back end.

Gone via free agency are a pair of top-nine forwards in veteran Chris Kunitz and third-line center Nick Bonino. Fourth-line center Matt Cullen was mulling retirement. Oskar Sundqvist, a logical replacement for Cullen, was traded away, leaving Carter Rowney as the best option for the spot. Pittsburgh GM Jim Rutherford promised to bring in a third-line center via trade, but said his timetable was open-ended and could stretch into the season.

EVGENI MALKIN

The most intriguing addition is rugged winger Ryan Reaves, who might not play a lot but whose acquisition in a trade with St. Louis that involved Sundqvist sent a message – one overtly stated by Rutherford – that the Penguins needed to deter unchecked rough treatment of Crosby and the team's other star players.

DEFENSE A sloppy group at times, Pittsburgh's defense corps should be improved. Letang, the MVP of the blueline, is due back around the start of the season. He will join Schultz, who isn't in the same class as Letang but certainly helped fill the void last spring. Together, they should make the loss of free agent Trevor Daley manageable.

Brian Dumoulin, Olli Maatta and Ian Cole have proven reliable. Pittsburgh essentially

SPECIAL TEAMS The power play had stretches where scoring was scarce despite the firepower, but it still finished third in the league. The core players return, although there might be competition between Letang and Schultz for the No. 1 quarterback role. Pittsburgh lost two solid PK guys in Bonino and Kunitz.

INTANGIBLES Crosby turned 30 in August but he is still in his prime. Long ago, he made it clear that this is his team. Everything about the Penguins seems to be an extension of Crosby's game – his skill, speed, work ethic and drive to win.

ROOKIES Forwards Daniel Sprong and Zach Aston-Reese could be the next impact youngsters, although both are likely to open the season in the AHL. Sprong has a "wow" factor and has worked to shore up the defensive side of his game. Aston-Reese, out of Northeastern, was one of the top U.S. college free agents.

X-FACTOR No team has won three straight Stanley Cups since the Islanders four-peated in the early 1980s. Pittsburgh has the talent and drive to win again. It remains to be seen whether their stamina and health will hold up.

THE BRASS Locals are already asking how soon Sullivan – with his bench management, emphasis on speed and "just play" mantra – could be considered the best coach in Pittsburgh sports history. Rutherford has provided the horses to help the stars. At 68, the GM says he has no inclination to retire. Why would he?

replaced veteran Ron Hainsey (who went to Toronto) with UFA addition Matt Hunwick (who came from Toronto), while also losing Mark Streit. Depth defender Chad Ruhwedel could see more ice.

GOALTENDING Pittsburgh, the team and the town, said a sad goodbye to longtime franchise goalie Marc-Andre Fleury, who was the marquee selection in the Vegas expansion draft. The development – and dominance – of Matt Murray made that inevitable. The Penguins picked up Antti Niemi as the new backup. He's a downgrade from Fleury, but Niemi is expected to play up to 30 games.

LEGACY PROJECT

Already a surefire Hall of Famer prior to last season, Sidney Crosby delivered more magic in 2016-17, taking home the World Cup, Stanley Cup, Conn Smythe Trophy and Rocket Richard Trophy.

Future WATCH

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. DANIEL SPRONG, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Charlottetown (QMJHL)
Sidetracked by shoulder surgery but put up beast-like offensive numbers in half a season.
ACQUIRED 46th overall, 2015 NHL '18-19

2. DERRICK POULIOT, D
AGE 23 TEAM Wilkes-Barre/Scranton (AHL)
Needs to work on his ability to process the game quickly. Probably his last real chance.
ACQUIRED 8th overall, 2012 NHL '17-18

3. TRISTAN JARRY, G
AGE 22 TEAM Wilkes-Barre/Scranton (AHL)
A read-and-react goalie with good size who also has a very calm demeanor.
ACQUIRED 44th overall, 2013 NHL '19-20

4. FILIP GUSTAVSSON, G
AGE 19 TEAM Lulea (Swe.)
Once called the 'Swedish Carey Price,' he's capable of big saves and he positions well.
ACQUIRED 55th overall, 2016 NHL '21-22

5. ZACHARY LAUZON, D
AGE 18 TEAM Rouyn-Noranda (QMJHL)
Defensive D-man of the year in the 'Q,' he has a playoff title with the Huskies.
ACQUIRED 51st overall, 2017 NHL '21-22

6. KASPER BJORKQVIST, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Providence (HE)
Not much to talk about offensively as an NCAA freshman, but he has a good eye for detail.
ACQUIRED 61st overall, 2016 NHL '21-22

7. DOMINIK SIMON, C
AGE 23 TEAM Wilkes-Barre/Scranton (AHL)
A slight dropoff in his production has raised questions, but the talent is still there.
ACQUIRED 137th overall, 2015 NHL '18-19

8. CONNOR HALL, D
AGE 19 TEAM Kitchener (OHL)
A large presence on the blueline who can strike fear into his smaller opponents.
ACQUIRED 77th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

9. CLAYTON PHILLIPS, D
AGE 18 TEAM Fargo (USHL)
Needs to produce more to make up for lack of size on defense. Bound for NCAA Minnesota.
ACQUIRED 93rd overall, 2017 NHL '22-23

10. JEFF TAYLOR, D
AGE 23 TEAM Union (ECAC)
A bounce-back junior year has many excited for Taylor and his strong puck-moving abilities.
ACQUIRED 203rd overall, 2014 NHL '19-20

St. Louis BLUES

BY JEREMY RUTHERFORD

THE 2016-17 SEASON was the end of the Ken Hitchcock era in St. Louis, with coach-in-waiting Mike Yeo promoted sooner than expected by the Blues, and the early returns were impressive. Hitchcock guided the team to five straight post-seasons but was fired Feb. 1. Under Yeo, St. Louis went 22-8-2 over the rest of the regular season and lasted two rounds in the playoffs, restoring hope in an organization that's in a retooling period.

A summer with two significant changes has continued the revitalization. The Blues dealt center Jori Lehtera to Philadelphia in exchange for Brayden Schenn, who had more goals (25) than Lehtera had points (22) last year. The club also brought in a new coaching staff (Craig Berube, Darryl Sydor, Daniel Tkaczuk, Steve Ott and David Alexander) that's much younger than last year's version. The trade of fan-favorite Ryan Reaves had its critics, but the majority of the team's recent moves have been well received.

OFFENSE Vladimir Tarasenko finished a whisker away from another 40-goal season, but he was the only constant in the Blues' offense. After Tarasenko's 39 tallies, the next leading goal-scorer was Patrik Berglund with 23, and only one other NHL team had a larger gap than the Blues' 16-goal differential (Tampa Bay, 19).

The club averaged more goals per game last season than in 2015-16, but had no threat up the middle and too many inconsistent performers. Paul Stastny's 40 points were the most of any center on the team, and there were long droughts for Alexander Steen and Jaden Schwartz (one goal each in a 25-game stretch) and Berglund (one goal in 30 games). The swap of Lehtera for Schenn helps at center, and Robby Fabbri's return from knee surgery will ease some of the scoring burden.

'MIR MORTAL?
Vladimir Tarasenko has been St. Louis' superhuman sniper since breaking out three seasons ago. He'll be hunting for his first Rocket Richard Trophy in 2017-18.

DEFENSE The Blues flourished defensively after the deadline deal that sent Kevin Shattenkirk to Washington. Team captain Alex Pietrangelo managed Shattenkirk's power play minutes, showing he may have more offense to offer, and Colton Parayko continued his ascent, assuming a top-four role.

The Blues need more point production from their defense, especially with the loss of Shattenkirk's quarterbacking abilities. The hard-shooting Parayko is capable of more scoring after seeing his goal total drop to four from nine, and he may get more opportunity if he supplants Pietrangelo on the top power play unit.

GOALTENDING Whether it was the influence of Martin Brodeur or Yeo replacing Hitchcock or Jake Allen just figuring it out on his own, the Blues' No. 1 netminder engineered a miraculous turnaround last season. After owning the NHL's worst save percentage among starting goalies, Allen posted elite numbers after the coaching change. The 27-year-old was superb in the playoffs, quieting concerns about a four-year, $17.4-million extension that kicks in this season. Carter Hutton returns as Allen's backup.

SPECIAL TEAMS The Blues had the eighth-best power play in the regular season, but the unit operated at just 6.7 percent in the postseason. That ranked last among the 16 playoff teams and contributed to the second-round loss to Nashville. Schenn's arrival will help. He tied for the most power play goals in the NHL with 17 and has 28 over the past two years. The team's penalty-killing unit finished third in the league under assistant coach Rick Wilson, who has moved on to Dallas.

INTANGIBLES The Blues have been one of the toughest teams in the West in recent years, but their composition has changed over the past two summers. They lost some beef when David Backes, Troy Brouwer and Ott left via free agency in 2016 and lost more after trading Reaves. St. Louis signed former Winnipeg enforcer Chris Thorburn to compensate.

ROOKIES The Blues took defenseman Jordan Schmaltz with the 25th pick in 2012 and he became the final first-rounder from that year to skate in an NHL game last season. Schmaltz only played nine games, but he has a shot to make the team this year. Jake Walman and Vince Dunn also are candidates on defense.

X-FACTOR Yeo will open his first full season behind the Blues' bench in good graces, but the spotlight on the 43-year-old will intensify now that he's had a summer to prepare. Fans want to see why GM Doug Armstrong handpicked Yeo as Hitchcock's successor so early when it was known that other coaches would become available.

THE BRASS Armstrong is entering the final season of his five-year contract, and it's a foregone conclusion that an extension is on the horizon. His teams have qualified for the playoffs six straight times and his big-picture approach illustrates the security he has with Tom Stillman's ownership group.

San Jose SHARKS

BY DAVID POLLAK

LAST SPRING'S PLAYOFF loss to Edmonton would seem to be the case of an older team on the decline bounced by a younger one on the rise. Now the Sharks must show that their first-round exit one year after reaching the Stanley Cup final was only a blip, not the start of a downhill slide.

That will be a tough task coming off a summer at the crossroads. With both Patrick Marleau, 38, and Joe Thornton, 38, testing free agency, GM Doug Wilson had to balance rewards for the franchise's longtime standouts with future commitments to other key players. Ultimately, Thornton accepted a one-year, $8-million deal, while Marleau was lured to Toronto by a generous three-year, $18.75-million offer. No team with a Norris Trophy-winning defenseman, three proven high-end scorers and solid goaltending should be dismissed, but the Sharks will need increased offense from unproven sources to become legitimate contenders once again.

OFFENSE Marleau contributed in all three zones, but his scoring will be missed most on a team that finished 19th in offense. A trade could be coming, but the Sharks said they initially will look internally to replace Marleau's 27 tallies from last season.

Coach Pete DeBoer didn't mask his disappointment in late April that forwards Joonas Donskoi and Chris Tierney hadn't progressed while Mikkel Boedker failed to meet expectations in his first season with San Jose. Timo Meier, the ninth overall draft pick in 2015, has the pedigree to step up, but he managed only six points in 34 NHL games last season. Other potential in-house contributors include Kevin Labanc, Danny O'Regan and Marcus Sorensen. If no one steps up, the Sharks will have to rely even more on their remaining big guns, with the two Joes – Pavelski and Thornton – on one line and Logan Couture anchoring another.

DEFENSE Seven months after inking Brent Burns to an eight-year, $64-million deal, Wilson signed Marc-Edouard Vlasic to a $56-million extension of equal length. That stabilizes the blueline. Expect Norris Trophy-winning Burns – who posted a career-high 29 goals and team-leading 76 points – to again be a beast at both ends of the ice, paired with Paul Martin. Expect Vlasic and Justin Braun to continue as the shutdown tandem.

With David Schlemko lost in the expansion draft, change is coming to the third pairing. Again, the Sharks are looking internally with Dylan DeMelo, whose style is similar to Schlemko's, seemingly in position to move into the rotation alongside Brenden Dillon. Tim Heed and Joakim Ryan, who have been toiling in the AHL, will get a long look, too.

GOALTENDING Martin Jones experienced a slight statistical drop-off from his first season as San Jose's starter, but there was still a lot to like about his body of work – 35 wins, 2.40 goals-against average, .912 save percentage – and the Sharks rewarded him with a six-year, $34.5-million contract extension. Aaron Dell, a solid backup in his rookie season who posted better numbers than Jones, will return in the same role.

SPECIAL TEAMS High on DeBoer's to-do list is the repair of a power play that dropped from second-best in the NHL to 25th. Only four Sharks players scored more than one power play goal last season, and Marleau was one of them with seven. Look for systemic changes. The penalty kill needs improvement after finishing in the bottom half for a third straight season. With former assistant Bob Boughner moving on to the Florida Panthers, successor Rob Zettler could have a reshaped role.

FEAR THE BEARD
There may not be a scarier two-way threat than Brent Burns, who cemented his place as one of the NHL's best in 2016-17 by leading all D-men in scoring and winning his first Norris Trophy.

INTANGIBLES His former teammates had said they hoped Marleau would be back. Will his absence be a distraction? The ex-captain wasn't a rah-rah guy, but he did lead by example over his 20-year career and had the respect of his teammates.

ROOKIES In recent years the Sharks have had better luck with European free agents (Donskoi, Melker Karlsson) than with some of their first-round picks. If the pattern holds, Czech defenseman Radim Simek, 24, could be this season's pleasant surprise.

X-FACTOR San Jose essentially has three top-six forwards and three vacancies, with a top priority of finding someone with the skill and smarts to play with Couture. Don't expect Tomas Hertl to move back to the wing to accomplish that. The Sharks still see him more valuable as their third-line center.

THE BRASS This summer had to be one of the most challenging yet for Wilson, who's the third-longest tenured GM in the NHL. Those long-term deals for Vlasic and Jones make sense, but ultimately, Wilson's off-season will be judged on how San Jose fares without Marleau, the Sharks' all-time leading scorer.

Tampa Bay LIGHTNING

BY ERIK ERLENDSSON

THE LIGHTNING ARE now on notice. After entering last season as a Stanley Cup favorite, Tampa Bay failed to make the post-season for the first time since 2013.

The roster has undergone a bit of a makeover with Valtteri Filppula, Brian Boyle and Ben Bishop traded at the deadline and Jason Garrison claimed by Vegas in the expansion draft. Most significantly, Jonathan Drouin was dealt to Montreal in July. With veterans Dan Girardi and Chris Kunitz added in free agency, one of the youngest teams in the league picked up some experience, while a healthy Steven Stamkos and Ryan Callahan would be akin to picking up off-season acquisitions. If it all fails to add up to a playoff berth, more significant changes will be in store.

OFFENSE Nikita Kucherov reached the 40-goal plateau last season and emerged as an NHL MVP candidate, carrying the team down the stretch. The return of a healthy Stamkos is a big boost, but the Bolts will have a difficult time replacing the creativity of Drouin, particularly on the power play.

Behind those top scorers, Tampa Bay needs bounce-back efforts from Tyler Johnson and Ondrej Palat along with more consistency from Alex Killorn to provide balance on the top lines. Vladislav Namestnikov is still looking for his breakout season while Yanni Gourde came on strong late to score some key goals and earn a new contract along with a penciled-in spot in the top-nine. Kunitz will chip in, while Brayden Point should be an offensive fixture after a 40-point rookie year.

DEFENSE Victor Hedman was a Norris Trophy finalist last season and Anton Stralman remains a steady presence on the second pairing. After that, it's youth and question marks.

Girardi signed as a free agent to replace Garrison, while Andrej Sustr and Braydon Coburn round out the veteran influence. Jake Dotchin emerged as a viable top-pairing option after a January recall, mostly playing alongside Hedman in what was an impressive half-season. Slater Koekkoek, the 10th overall pick in the 2012 draft, will make the jump in his fourth pro season. Highly touted Mikhail Sergachev, acquired from Montreal in the Drouin deal, will also come to camp looking to earn a job, even with a year of junior eligibility remaining.

GOALTENDING The net now belongs to Andrei Vasilevskiy. After the trade of former Vezina Trophy finalist Bishop last season, Tampa Bay turned the crease over to the 23-year-old goaltender who has 90 games of NHL experience after being selected 19th overall in 2012. Peter Budaj, who played well after coming over at the trade deadline, will handle the backup duties after signing a two-year contract extension, while veteran Michael Leighton came over as a free agent to be the No. 3 netminder and mentor first-year pro Connor Ingram in AHL Syracuse.

SPECIAL TEAMS Under assistant coach Todd Richards, the Lightning's power play became a source of strength, finishing sixth in the league one year after ranking 26th – and that improvement was made without Stamkos for most of the season. With the return of Stamkos, the power play figures to be fearsome. The penalty kill took a slight step back, falling to 13th from seventh. A healthy Callahan and the additions of Girardi and Kunitz will help.

ANOTHER LEVEL
Injuries plagued the Lightning last season, ultimately costing them a playoff spot, but Nikita Kucherov put the team on his back and earned MVP consideration in a breakout campaign.

2016-17	94

INTANGIBLES When Stamkos and Callahan were both absent last year for long stretches, the leadership void was felt. Those two are expected back on a full-time basis, while veterans Girardi and Kunitz were brought in to join Coburn, Hedman and Stralman as experienced leaders.

ROOKIES The Lightning's farm system is loaded with upcoming prospects, but the best of the bunch is newly acquired Sergachev, the ninth overall pick in 2016. The 19-year-old defenseman, who won the Memorial Cup with OHL Windsor last season, plays with flair and confidence and will be given every opportunity to make an impact.

X-FACTOR After enduring injuries throughout the season, the Lightning need to avoid the crippling long-term variety that plagued Stamkos and Callahan in 2016-17. If healthy, the Lightning will contend for the Presidents' Trophy and Stanley Cup.

THE BRASS Coach Jon Cooper came under fire as the team stumbled through the first three months last season, but a late charge staved off thoughts of a change behind the bench even as Cooper failed to lead a team to the post-season for the first time in his professional career. Another slow start will land Cooper on the hot seat.

MIKHAIL SERGACHEV

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. MIKHAIL SERGACHEV, D
AGE 19 TEAM Windsor (OHL)
Hard-shooting, physical blueliner is mature beyond his 19 years. He's ready to step right in.
ACQUIRED From Mtl, June 2017 NHL '17-18

2. CAL FOOTE, D
AGE 18 TEAM Kelowna (WHL)
Son of ex-NHLer Adam needs to improve his footwork, but he's sturdy and intelligent.
ACQUIRED 14th overall, 2017 NHL '19-20

3. LIBOR HAJEK, D
AGE 19 TEAM Saskatoon (WHL)
A smart defender who doesn't force plays on the rush. His skating has improved.
ACQUIRED 37th overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

4. ANTHONY CIRELLI, C
AGE 20 TEAM Erie (OHL)
Offense got boost after trade from Oshawa. Had great playoff with 15 goals in 22 games.
ACQUIRED 72nd overall, 2015 NHL '19-20

5. SLATER KOEKKOEK, D
AGE 23 TEAM Syracuse (AHL)
Stronger defensive play will get him over the hump. Has outside shot to be a third-pair guy.
ACQUIRED 10th overall, 2012 NHL '17-18

6. TAYLOR RADDYSH, RW
AGE 19 TEAM Erie (OHL)
His ability to score and make plays are not in question, but his skating abilities are.
ACQUIRED 58th overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

7. BRETT HOWDEN, C
AGE 19 TEAM Moose Jaw (WHL)
Captain got pro taste with eight AHL games (three goals) late last season. A 200-foot player.
ACQUIRED 27th overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

8. MATHIEU JOSEPH, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Saint John (QMJHL)
Two-way winger took game to another level with excellent playoff (32 points in 18 games).
ACQUIRED 120th overall, 2015 NHL '18-19

9. ALEXANDER VOLKOV, RW
AGE 20 TEAM St. Petersburg Jr. (Rus.)
Slipped through drafts in 2015 and '16. Needs to cut down on time spent in penalty box.
ACQUIRED 48th overall, 2017 NHL '20-21

10. MITCHELL STEPHENS, C
AGE 20 TEAM London (OHL)
Sub six-footer does a lot of things well, but his production has been slow in coming.
ACQUIRED 33rd overall, 2015 NHL '20-21

SCOUTING REPORT
With excellent size and an NHL pedigree, there's a lot to like about Foote. His skating needs to improve, but he can be effective using his smarts or his strength. The kid has some offense, too.

Toronto MAPLE LEAFS

BY MIKE BROPHY

DON'T LET ANYBODY try to convince you otherwise: that patient rebuild plan the Maple Leafs have been trumpeting the past few years has been tossed out the window.

With the signing of three veteran free agents in July, the Leafs are unquestionably taking a run at winning the Stanley Cup sooner rather than later. Buoyed by the play of a handful of exceptional rookies, the Leafs were one of the NHL's surprise teams last season, taking Presidents' Trophy-winning Washington to six games in the first round of the playoffs. Toronto hopes the addition of Patrick Marleau, Dominic Moore and Ron Hainsey, along with the continued development of super-skilled youngsters Auston Matthews, William Nylander, Mitch Marner and Connor Brown, will boost the team into a contending position.

OFFENSE Matthews, 20, is already a superstar and the team's most gifted offensive threat. After scoring four goals in his NHL debut, the first overall pick in the 2016 draft established franchise rookie records for goals (40) and points (69) en route to being named the NHL's rookie of the year. The Leafs boast a wealth of offensive weapons that includes Nylander, 21, and Marner, 20, who each had 61 points as rookies. Center Nazem Kadri took his game to the next level, recording career-bests in goals (32) and points (61) while becoming a favorite of coach Mike Babcock.

Marleau turns 38 before the start of the season, but he still managed 27 goals last year. Babcock believes joining the exuberant Leafs will be the "fountain of youth" for the fleet-of-foot 20-year vet.

DEFENSE The 36-year-old Hainsey and his 907 games of NHL experience should help settle an otherwise young blueline after he played a major role in Pittsburgh's Stanley Cup run. Jake Gardiner, 27, has improved with two years of Babcock's teaching, while Nikita Zaitsev impressed as a rookie, earning a seven-year contract extension. Connor Carrick and Martin Marincin remain works in progress.

The wild card is 23-year-old Morgan Rielly, who has top-pair potential but, due in part to an ankle injury, took a step back last season. His production and time on ice both dropped from the year prior. With an abundance of skilled forwards and facing a bit of a salary cap squeeze, there was a feeling that GM Lou Lamoriello would try to part with a winger or two in exchange for a top-four defenseman.

GOALTENDING Frederik Andersen played a career-high 66 games in his first season with the Maple Leafs, finishing with a 33-16-14 record, .918 save percentage and four shutouts. Andersen gives his team a chance to win most nights, and at 27 years old, he's hitting his prime. Toronto re-signed veteran Curtis McElhinney to be the backup, as Garret Sparks continues to develop in the AHL.

SPECIAL TEAMS The power play made great strides, improving from 29th to second. Nylander led the way with 26 points, while fellow freshmen Matthews and Marner each chipped in 21. In two years under Babcock, the penalty killing has been significantly better. Departed UFA D-men Roman Polak and Matt Hunwick logged a ton of PK time, so those minutes will be filled by Hainsey and others. Zach Hyman led Leafs forwards in PK ice time and shorthanded points.

NO. 1 AGAIN
After going first overall in the 2016 NHL draft, Auston Matthews captured the Calder Trophy in a near-unanimous vote, becoming the first Leafs player to win the award since 1966.

INTANGIBLES In acquiring three players in their late 30s – Marleau, Moore and Hainsey – the Leafs added 301 games of playoff experience to the dressing room. After getting their first taste of the post-season – and pushing the first-place Capitals to overtime five times – Toronto's young core enters 2017-18 with confidence.

ROOKIES Following a season in which Toronto employed nine rookies – seven as regulars – and finished with three of the top four freshmen scorers in the league (and six of the top 21), don't be surprised if none make it in '17-18. The best bets are defenseman Travis Dermott, 20, who emerged as the top two-way defender on the AHL's Toronto Marlies, and right winger Kasperi Kapanen, who joined the Leafs late in the 2016-17 season and added some scoring punch to the fourth line in the playoffs.

X-FACTOR Toronto's top 12 scorers missed a combined 16 games last season. That's an incredible run of good health, and it can't be counted on to happen again. But the Leafs do have depth, especially up front.

THE BRASS This team belongs to president Brendan Shanahan. It was Shanahan who changed the culture in the dressing room, engineered the hiring of Babcock, convinced veteran GM Lamoriello to join the franchise, and elevated assistant GM Mark Hunter to a position of influence. This is one of the best front offices in the NHL.

Future WATCH

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. KASPERI KAPANEN, RW
AGE 21 TEAM Toronto (AHL)
Elevated his game in AHL and showed in NHL playoffs he can play a role on fourth line.
ACQUIRED From Pit, Feb. 2015 NHL '17-18

2. TIMOTHY LILJEGREN, D
AGE 18 TEAM Rogle (Swe.)
Mobile, puck-handling defender with excellent offensive instincts – and he's even a right shot.
ACQUIRED 17th overall, 2017 NHL '19-20

3. CARL GRUNDSTROM, RW
AGE 19 TEAM Frolunda (Swe.)
Plays an in-your-face style similar to that of Leo Komarov, but with better hands.
ACQUIRED 57th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

4. JEREMY BRACCO, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Windsor (OHL)
Goal-scoring dried up a bit after trade from Kitchener. He still needs to get stronger.
ACQUIRED 61st overall, 2015 NHL '19-20

5. ADAM BROOKS, C
AGE 21 TEAM Regina (WHL)
Gaudy stats over past two seasons (250 points). After five years in WHL, he needs a new test.
ACQUIRED 92nd overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

6. JOSEPH WOLL, G
AGE 19 TEAM Boston College (HE)
Stepped in as a just-turned-18 freshman and was excellent. Flexible and athletic.
ACQUIRED 62nd overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

7. ANDREW NIELSEN, D
AGE 20 TEAM Toronto (AHL)
Big with a mean streak, first-year pro led his team's blueline in scoring. Skating needs work.
ACQUIRED 65th overall, 2015 NHL '19-20

8. TRAVIS DERMOTT, D
AGE 20 TEAM Toronto (AHL)
Sometimes tries to do too much on the ice. Working on finding consistency.
ACQUIRED 34th overall, 2015 NHL '19-20

9. EEMELI RASANEN, D
AGE 18 TEAM Kingston (OHL)
Big, competitive defender has imposing frame and good hockey smarts. Needs quickness.
ACQUIRED 59th overall, 2017 NHL '21-22

10. J.D. GREENWAY, D
AGE 19 TEAM Wisconsin (Big Ten)
Sturdy blueliner is a decent skater and very solid along the wall. Entering sophomore year.
ACQUIRED 72nd overall, 2016 NHL '21-22

SCOUTING REPORT
On the plus side of the ledger, Liljegren is a dynamic offensive defenseman who can run a power play. But he did go through a tough year due to a bout with mono and playing on a bad Rogle squad.

Vancouver CANUCKS

BY BEN KUZMA

THE R-WORD HAS taken hold in Vancouver. The Canucks could no longer deny the necessity of embracing a rebuild after a 29th-place finish. There's a new coach in Travis Green with new ideas, and key free agent acquisitions on short-term deals in Sam Gagner and Michael Del Zotto, who should help the franchise properly develop an improving talent pool.

Competing in the powerhouse Pacific Division will be a challenge, to say the least. Gagner will help prop up the power play and Del Zotto will add some scoring pop to a back end that mustered just 22 goals. If the Canucks don't rack up another 462 man-games lost to injury, they may make a modest 10-point leap up the standings, but still no playoffs.

OFFENSE Henrik and Daniel Sedin will be 37 when the season begins. Rebounding from 50- and 44-point seasons, respectively, is possible, especially if they don't have revolving right wingers and if Markus Granlund remains the right fit after scoring a career-high 19 goals. Daniel's 15 goals last season should be an anomaly with assistant coach Newell Brown returning after four seasons in Arizona to run the power play. Brown guided the Canucks' top-ranked power play in 2010-11, and by employing a 1-3-1 system, getting the right-shot Gagner involved and being more open to personnel changes, there should be improvement on a man-advantage unit that was second-worst in the league last season.

Bo Horvat didn't score in his final 17 regular season games, but still led the team in goals (20) and points (52). The fourth-year center should take another step with projected linemates Sven Baertschi (career-best 18 goals last season) and Brock Boeser (four goals in a nine-game debut). Loui Eriksson must rebound from just 11 goals.

DEFENSE It went from bad to worse with critical injuries to Chris Tanev, Alex Edler and Erik Gudbranson. There was little scoring (Edler led the blueline with six goals), questionable defending and the Canucks became too easy to play against. Nikita Tryamkin bolted back to the KHL and Luca Sbisa was claimed in the expansion draft.

The Canucks made an unsuccessful play for Jason Demers, who used his no-trade clause to veto a move from Florida, but landed Del Zotto and depth in Patrick Wiercioch via free agency. At 27, Del Zotto joins his fourth NHL club and took a pay cut in his two-year, $6-million deal. He's coming off a frustrating 18-point season in Philadelphia.

GOALTENDING Ryan Miller opted to sign as a UFA in Anaheim after the Canucks only showed interest in a one-year, incentive-laden contract to buy prized prospect Thatcher Demko one more season in the AHL. That means Jacob Markstrom, 27, whose three-year, $11-million extension kicks in this season, will get a chance to prove he can start more than 25 games. He outplayed Miller in the first half of last season, and his 2.63 goals-against average and .910 save percentage were good numbers on a team that couldn't defend. Anders Nilsson, 27, signed a two-year, $5-million deal to push Markstrom.

SPECIAL TEAMS Brown will be the team MVP if the returning assistant coach can rejuvenate the pitiful power play. The 29th-ranked unit was plodding and predictable, but that's about to change. The slick and creative Gagner netted eight power play markers last season, so the right winger should make an impact.

BO GROWS
Bo Horvat's team hasn't won many games over the past two seasons, but the industrious center has evolved into a productive top-six contributor in that time.

INTANGIBLES Green was known for his tough love in AHL Utica after four seasons there. He will team with Nolan Baumgartner, Doug Jarvis and Manny Malhotra to push competitive buttons. Green's willing to live with mistakes to allow younger players to finally make an NHL impression.

ROOKIES Boeser, 20, signed in March and joined the Canucks after a stellar NCAA career. His four goals in nine games teased his potential as a top-six fixture and power play option. Olli Juolevi, 19, may have outgrown OHL London, but he's a long shot to make the NHL this season. But he's too young for the AHL, so it's either the Canucks or a loan to a team in Europe.

X-FACTOR Vancouver's 462 man-games lost to injury killed any hope of challenging for an unlikely wild card spot. Even with good luck and good health, the Canucks' playoff hopes are slim, but another key injury would crush any post-season dreams.

THE BRASS Green is here for the long haul and promises to instill an up-tempo game and play the kids. GM Jim Benning has had three good drafts in a row and navigated the off-season without handing out a cumbersome contract like the six-year, $36-million deal he gave to Eriksson last year.

Future WATCH

1. OLLI JUOLEVI, D
AGE 19 TEAM London (OHL)
Smooth-skating two-way blueliner reads the game well. He's more defense than offense.
ACQUIRED 5th overall, 2016 NHL '18-19

2. ELIAS PETTERSSON, C
AGE 18 TEAM Timra (Swe.)
Shifty playmaker has excellent on-ice vision and top-notch work ethic. Nice speed, too.
ACQUIRED 5th overall, 2017 NHL '19-20

3. BROCK BOESER, RW
AGE 20 TEAM North Dakota (NCHC)
Fearless power forward plays with blend of speed, skill and grit. Good finisher.
ACQUIRED 23rd overall, 2015 NHL '17-18

4. THATCHER DEMKO, G
AGE 21 TEAM Utica (AHL)
Goalie of the future has great work ethic and intensity level. Getting lots of action in AHL.
ACQUIRED 36th overall, 2014 NHL '19-20

5. KOLE LIND, RW
AGE 18 TEAM Kelowna (WHL)
Skilled, playmaking winger with good hockey sense. He could get stronger and shoot more.
ACQUIRED 33rd overall, 2017 NHL '19-20

6. JAKE VIRTANEN, RW
AGE 21 TEAM Utica (AHL)
Outstanding speed and shot, but his hockey IQ is suspect. Conditioning also an issue.
ACQUIRED 6th overall, 2014 NHL '18-19

7. JONATHAN DAHLEN, C
AGE 19 TEAM Timra (Swe.)
Intelligent, skilled pivot working on his skating. Obtained in Burrows trade.
ACQUIRED From Ott, Feb. 2017 NHL '19-20

8. NIKOLAY GOLDOBIN, LW
AGE 21 TEAM Utica (AHL)
Has finishing ability but needs to gain strength to keep up in the higher ranks.
ACQUIRED From SJ, Feb. 2017 NHL '17-18

9. JONAH GADJOVICH, LW
AGE 18 TEAM Owen Sound (OHL)
Power forward has good shot and is a net-front presence. Skating, defensive play need work.
ACQUIRED 55th overall, 2017 NHL '21-22

10. GUILLAUME BRISEBOIS, D
AGE 20 TEAM Charlottetown (QMJHL)
Opened eyes at NHL training camp last fall with his mobility and smooth skating.

Vegas GOLDEN KNIGHTS

BY SCOTT ZERR

AFTER ROLLING THE dice in the expansion and entry drafts, the Vegas Golden Knights are like Penn without Teller, Mike and no Magic, Carrot Top minus the props. Not bad, but there's definitely something missing.

GM George McPhee has put the initial building blocks in place for the NHL's 31st franchise, but now full-scale construction becomes the ongoing task. The inaugural roster should be good enough to keep the Golden Knights from winding up buried in the desert like a couple of gone-wrong Goodfellas. Whether they go from lounge act to Rat Pack is the question.

OFFENSE The toughest part of an expansion draft is finding any semblance of offense, yet the Golden Knights were able to secure some scoring talent as they poached NHL teams' rosters. Jonathan Marchessault and one-time 40-goal man James Neal will be the main drivers of whatever offense the Knights can muster. The hope is former 20-goal wingers David Perron and Reilly Smith can rediscover their scoring touch.

The Golden Knights' biggest deficiency is down the middle, as the 1-2 center tandem of 30-year-old KHL import Vadim Shipachyov and Dallas castoff Cody Eakin is far from proven. Vegas has a few young wild cards up front who could pitch in offensively, namely 6-foot-4 right winger Alex Tuch, energetic left winger Brendan Leipsic and former Rangers depth center Oscar Lindberg, but finding goals will be a problem.

DEFENSE The Knights managed to pluck a handful of respectable young blueliners in Shea Theodore, Nate Schmidt, Colin Miller and Brayden McNabb. Theodore, a 22-year-old who ranked 22nd in THN's Future Watch 2017, is the prize of the bunch and has the potential to grow into a top-pairing defenseman. The emerging Schmidt performed well for Washington in the playoffs this past spring and is familiar to former Capitals GM McPhee. Miller skates and shoots exceptionally well and was quietly effective over two seasons in Boston.

Vegas resident Deryk Engelland, scooped up from Calgary, leads the veteran portion of the defense corps, along with Jason Garrison, Luca Sbisa and Clayton Stoner.

GOALTENDING The Knights landed their No. 1 goalie and an instant fan-favorite by nabbing Marc-Andre Fleury from Pittsburgh. He's a three-time Stanley Cup champion and is motivated after losing his starting job to Matt Murray. If Fleury eventually becomes trade bait, Vegas has a potential No. 1 in Calvin Pickard. He played 50 games for Colorado last season and was a standout on Canada's silver medal-winning entry at the 2017 World Championship.

SPECIAL TEAMS Of Marchessault's 30 goals last season, eight came on the power play. Shipachyov scored 76 points in 50 KHL games, so he'll be leaned on for PP production. Neal is the club's most established goal-scorer and will also be counted on. Garrison and Miller own cannons from the point, with the skilled Theodore and Schmidt also in the mix. With plenty of bottom-six forwards on the roster, competition for time on the penalty kill will be stiff, but Fleury is undoubtedly the most important player.

INTANGIBLES Will visiting teams be blinded by the bright lights of The Strip, stay out too late the night before games, take the Golden Knights lightly and surrender points to the league's newest franchise? Conversely, how will Golden Knights players adjust to their new surroundings?

PLACE YOUR BETS

The debate about the viability of Las Vegas as a suitable NHL market has raged since the city was awarded a franchise in June 2016. Will hockey take hold in Sin City?

ROOKIES Not being old enough to sit at the blackjack table doesn't have anything to do with the fact Vegas is better-served in sending its three first-round picks back to junior. Cody Glass (sixth overall), Nick Suzuki (13th) and Erik Brannstrom (15th) comprise the team's future core. In contention for a roster spot will be 2014 first-rounder Tuch as well as Leipsic, who was a point-per-game player in the AHL last season.

X-FACTOR It's very unlikely, but what happens if Vegas is within striking range of a playoff spot just prior to the trade deadline? Do they fight on, striving for a wild card to keep the fans happy, or do they auction off the expiring contracts of Neal, Perron and others to lay more foundation for the future?

THE BRASS McPhee was given high praise for his expansion draft assembly as he negotiated a balance between icing a (relatively) competitive roster and building a future contender via the draft. There's plenty of wheeling and dealing ahead for McPhee and the Knights. Coach Gerard Gallant, fired by Florida last season, has a chance to be at the helm of building a winning brand.

SCOUTING REPORT
Glass exploded for 94 points during his sophomore season in the WHL and there should be more to come. A playmaker with slick hands and high hockey IQ, he just needs to dig in a little more.

Washington CAPITALS

BY TARIK EL-BASHIR

AFTER SPENDING THE past three years fortifying their roster for a run at the Stanley Cup, the Capitals find themselves in a tough spot: they're suffering from a championship hangover, minus the championship. The salary cap crunch that we all saw coming arrived this off-season – and it wasn't pretty. Justin Williams, Karl Alzner, Kevin Shattenkirk and Daniel Winnik all left via free agency. A few days later, GM Brian MacLellan was forced to create cap space by trading Marcus Johansson to New Jersey for draft picks. And on top of all that, Vegas poached Nate Schmidt in the expansion draft.

The bottom line? After back-to-back Presidents' Trophies, coach Barry Trotz won't have as many weapons at his disposal. But it's not all bad news. There's still a formidable core featuring forwards Alex Ovechkin, Nicklas Backstrom, T.J. Oshie and Evgeny Kuznetsov, defensemen John Carlson, Matt Niskanen and Dmitry Orlov and goalie Braden Holtby. That will be enough to send Washington to the playoffs for the 10th time in 11 seasons.

OFFENSE The Capitals boasted the NHL's third-best offense last season, but the departures of Williams and Johansson (24 goals apiece) make it unreasonable to expect that kind of production again. Ovechkin followed three consecutive 50-goal seasons with 33 goals and 69 points last year. Is this the beginning of a precipitous decline for the 32-year-old scoring machine?

It's obvious who will be counted on to carry the offense. What's less obvious is who will provide the secondary scoring. The expectation is that it will come via increased production from youngsters Andre Burakovsky, who is moving into the top-six full-time, Brett Connolly, Tom Wilson and prospect Jakub Vrana, a first-round draft pick (13th overall) in 2014.

DEFENSE This is where the cap issues will be felt the most. Alzner and Shattenkirk walked and there wasn't room to sign a replacement for the Vegas-bound Schmidt. So who's left? Carlson and a solid pair in Niskanen and Orlov, plus veteran Brooks Orpik and depth defender Taylor Chorney.

After that, it's youth and question marks. It seems likely at least two prospects – some combination of Madison Bowey, Christian Djoos, Tyler Lewington and possibly 2016 first-rounder Lucas Johansen – will see significant playing time. That, of course, means a lot of inexperience at a position where experience matters.

GOALTENDING Although Holtby sagged a bit in the post-season, there's not much hand-wringing in D.C. about his ability to bounce back. The 27-year-old won the Vezina Trophy in 2016 and was a finalist last season. The dependable Philipp Grubauer returns as Holt-by's backup. If there's any reason for concern, it's that Holtby has logged a lot of hard miles in recent seasons – since 2014, he has started more games and faced more shots than any other goalie.

SPECIAL TEAMS The Capitals' power play tied with the Penguins for third-best last season, while the penalty kill was the league's seventh-most effective unit. However, many of the players who helped propel those units to the upper echelon are gone. Johansson was third on the team in power play points, while Williams was tied for fourth in power play goals. Washington's penalty kill also took a hit – Alzner led the team in short-handed ice time. There will be a drop-off for the Caps' special teams. The only question is how steep will it be?

FRONT & CENTER
Nicklas Backstrom, the Caps' underrated playmaker, finally earned widespread recognition last season after surging to his best offensive campaign since 2009-10.

INTANGIBLES Trotz's assistant coaches – Todd Reirden, Lane Lambert, Blaine Forsythe and Mitch Korn – are regarded as some of the best in the NHL. Reirden and Lambert have been finalists for head coaching jobs. Given the team's injection of youth, teaching will be as important as ever this winter.

ROOKIES At training camp the past few years, youngsters knew they had little chance of sticking. It'll be different this time around. In addition to the aforementioned prospects vying for jobs on the blueline, forwards Vrana, Nathan Walker, Riley Barber and Chandler Stephenson figure to be in the mix for spots.

X-FACTOR After a seven-goal regular season, Wilson enjoyed a playoff breakout, scoring three times versus Toronto, including an OT-winner. Can some of that post-season success carry over? The Caps, who are expected to give Wilson more ice time, certainly hope so.

THE BRASS MacLellan spent the past three years aggressively pursuing top talent to supplement Ovechkin & Co. Now the GM faces a more difficult challenge in retooling a top-heavy roster on the fly. So far, the results have been mixed. Trotz said in late June he had not discussed a contract extension to take him beyond the 2017-18 season.

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. ILYA SAMSONOV, G
AGE 20 TEAM Metallurg (KHL)
Tall, athletic stopper outplayed 33-year-old KHL veteran but got less than half the workload.
ACQUIRED 22nd overall, 2015 NHL '19-20

2. JAKUB VRANA, LW
AGE 21 TEAM Hershey (AHL)
Vrana is a pure scorer. He'll be up full-time when he's better able to play in his own end.
ACQUIRED 13th overall, 2014 NHL '17-18

3. JONAS SIEGENTHALER, D
AGE 20 TEAM Zurich (Swi.)
Don't let his big, beefy frame fool you, he can skate with the best of them.
ACQUIRED 57th overall, 2015 NHL '19-20

4. MADISON BOWEY, D
AGE 22 TEAM Hershey (AHL)
He has size, skill, speed and good instincts. He's the complete package for a top-four D-man.
ACQUIRED 53rd overall, 2013 NHL '17-18

5. LUCAS JOHANSEN, D
AGE 19 TEAM Kelowna (WHL)
Moves the puck well but not what you would call offensive. Ryan's brother needs to bulk up.
ACQUIRED 28th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

6. CONNOR HOBBS, D
AGE 20 TEAM Regina (WHL)
Pure offense from the blueline. The rest of his game is rounding into form as well.
ACQUIRED 143rd overall, 2015 NHL '18-19

7. CHANDLER STEPHENSON, C
AGE 23 TEAM Hershey (AHL)
Physical player can throw his weight around as a third-line center. Good penalty killer.
ACQUIRED 77th overall, 2012 NHL '17-18

8. TOBIAS GEISSER, D
AGE 18 TEAM Zug EV Academy (Swi.)
When the going gets tough, this big defender gets going. Plays a simple, two-way game.
ACQUIRED 120th overall, 2017 NHL '21-22

9. RILEY BARBER, RW
AGE 23 TEAM Hershey (AHL)
Missed half of his second AHL season due to injury. More a scorer than a playmaker.
ACQUIRED 167th overall, 2012 NHL '18-19

10. TRAVIS BOYD, C
AGE 24 TEAM Hershey (AHL)
An NCAA Minnesota grad, this pass-first pivot led the Bears in points. Good depth forward.
ACQUIRED 177th overall, 2011 NHL '18-19

2017 NO. 1 DRAFT PICK

TOBIAS GEISSER

POSITION
Defenseman

SELECTED
120th overall

Zug

Mattias Ekholm

SCOUTING REPORT
A big kid who has decent feet, Geisser should've been on Switzerland's World Junior Championship squad last year. He'll be a key member of the Swiss national team in 2018.

Winnipeg JETS

BY JARED CLINTON

THE TIME FOR the promise of a bright future is over in Winnipeg. With all the pieces in place, the Jets need to start winning. Over the past two seasons, Winnipeg has had a squad capable of competing for a playoff berth, but on-ice shortcomings have continued to hold them back. In 2015-16, the Jets fell short with an inexperienced club that took its lumps, and the past season came with high expectations, only to fall victim to injuries and abysmal goaltending.

GM Kevin Cheveldayoff has sized up his squad and addressed the areas necessary to make the franchise a perennial playoff contender. He's added help between the pipes, bolstered the blueline and projects growth from the team's young stars. If all goes according to plan, the Jets should see some real, tangible success for the first time in a few seasons. The biggest problem now: they play in the minefield that is the Central Division.

OFFENSE As the seventh-highest scoring team least season, Winnipeg isn't lacking in the goal department. Patrik Laine was as advertised, pulverizing pucks and terrorizing goalies with a team-leading 36 goals, and he was one of five Jets to eclipse the 20-goal plateau. Perhaps the biggest revelation was the play of Nikolaj Ehlers, who grew substantially in his sophomore season and posted a 25-goal, 64-point campaign.

The central focus of the attack is Mark Scheifele. He set career highs once again with 32 goals and 82 points, and when you add Blake Wheeler, Bryan Little and a blueline that features Dustin Byfuglien, Jacob Trouba and Josh Morrissey, it's clear offense is the Jets' greatest asset.

DEFENSE Not enough can be said of Tobias Enstrom's decision to waive his no-movement clause ahead of the expansion draft, as it allowed the Jets to retain a very promising defense corps. They may fly under the radar, but Byfuglien, Enstrom, Trouba, Morrissey and Tyler Myers makes for a rock-solid group, and Winnipeg added to that by inking UFA Dmitry Kulikov in the summer.

It should be a smooth-skating, puck-moving blueline, but the prolonged defensive success of the team may hinge on health. Losing Myers, first to injury and then to a personal matter, threw things into disarray before Morrissey got settled last season, and the Jets want more reliability from the back end.

GOALTENDING Winnipeg was the only team to finish in the top 15 in scoring and still end up with a negative goal differential. That speaks volumes about the Jets' need for goaltending help. Cheveldayoff strengthened the crease by signing Steve Mason, who ranks among the league leaders in 5-on-5 save percentage over the past four seasons. Winnipeg hasn't given up on 24-year-old Connor Hellebuyck, however. He's still the goalie of the future, but he'll have to split starts until he shows he's ready to take over as the clear-cut No. 1.

SPECIAL TEAMS Laine's arrival as a triggerman helped elevate a league-worst power play in 2015-16 to the middle of the pack. While the Jets still want to get more out of their man-advantage unit, the primary area of concern should be strengthening the penalty kill. Better goaltending will help, but better shorthanded results start with staying out of the box. Winnipeg was down a man more often than all but two teams last season and only two teams allowed more power play goals.

INTANGIBLES Captaining one of the league's youngest teams is no easy task for Wheeler, but he did an exemplary job. His consoling of Laine after a costly own-goal by the youngster was exactly the reason Wheeler wears the 'C.' Guidance from a veteran who will do whatever it takes for success can rub off on the rest of the team as Winnipeg seeks to foster a winning environment.

ROOKIES The Jets' draft-and-develop model has created a logjam for those trying to crack the lineup, but left winger Kyle Connor, selected 17th overall in 2015, and center Jack Roslovic, taken eight picks later, are two candidates to add scoring punch.

X-FACTOR All eyes are on the crease. The work has been done to insulate the net with talented, high-scoring forwards and defensemen who can transition up ice, but it will all be for naught if the tandem of Mason and Hellebuyck fails to hold the fort.

THE BRASS Though there have been rumblings of an extension for well-liked but divisive coach Paul Maurice, this is likely a show-me season for the bench boss. Winnipeg has too much raw talent to continue to miss the post-season, and if the Jets stumble out of the gate or hit a snag at any point, a change might be in the cards.

KYLE CONNOR

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. KYLE CONNOR, LW
AGE 20 TEAM Manitoba (AHL)
High-octane winger landed a spot on Jets right out of college, but he needed time on farm.
ACQUIRED 17th overall, 2015 NHL '17-18

2. JACK ROSLOVIC, C
AGE 20 TEAM Manitoba (AHL)
Responsible two-way player could use another year in minors to refine offensive touch.
ACQUIRED 25th overall, 2015 NHL '18-19

3. LOGAN STANLEY, D
AGE 19 TEAM Windsor (OHL)
Knee injury sidetracked his development. Good skater and puck-mover with a mean streak.
ACQUIRED 18th overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

4. KRISTIAN VESALAINEN, LW
AGE 18 TEAM Frolunda (Swe.)
Sizable winger strong on the puck, quick on his feet. Just needs to ramp up intensity.
ACQUIRED 24th overall, 2017 NHL '20-21

5. ERIC COMRIE, G
AGE 22 TEAM Manitoba (AHL)
Competitive with good lateral movement. An AHL workhorse in his first two pro seasons.
ACQUIRED 59th overall, 2013 NHL '19-20

6. DYLAN SAMBERG, D
AGE 18 TEAM Hermantown (USHL)
Imposing, two-way defender with good physical tools. Off to Minnesota-Duluth.
ACQUIRED 43rd overall, 2017 NHL '21-22

7. TUCKER POOLMAN, D
AGE 24 TEAM North Dakota (NCHC)
Late-bloomer signed pro contract after his junior NCAA season. Plays mature game.
ACQUIRED 127th overall, 2013 NHL '19-20

8. MIKHAIL BERDIN, G
AGE 19 TEAM Sioux Falls (USHL)
Rail-thin stopper with good instincts had impressive first North American season.
ACQUIRED 157th overall, 2016 NHL '22-23

9. LUKE GREEN, D
AGE 19 TEAM Sherbrooke (QMJHL)
Right-shot defender has decent offensive tools but needs to clean up his defensive play.
ACQUIRED 79th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

10. ERIK FOLEY, LW
AGE 20 TEAM Providence (HE)
Skilled winger jumped from eighth in team scoring as freshman to second as sophomore.
ACQUIRED 78th overall, 2015 NHL '20-21

SCOUTING REPORT
Vesalainen showed a ton of promise early on but couldn't get results. He's a big puck-protector with skating and skill, he just needs to finish more. He'll play for HPK back in Finland in 2017-18.

STOP SLASHING AT THE SOURCE

JOHNNY GAUDREAU

Huddle up, gentlemen. I've got something to say: If you players really want to curb this ridiculous outbreak of slashing hands, take the bold move and do it yourselves

AN OPEN LETTER TO ALL NHL PLAYERS:

Hey guys. Hope you enjoyed your summer vacations. Hey, I noticed a good number of you got hitched, which is great. We married guys can always use big, strong fellows like yourselves on the oars.

You may not have noticed what came out of the GM meetings during the NHL draft in June. Can't blame you if you didn't. If you were playing in the Stanley Cup final, you were probably a little too focused to care about it, and if you weren't, you were probably off touring around Europe or getting married or something.

So we'll get you up to speed. The league's GMs, hockey guys through and through, are concerned about the epidemic of slashing to the hands that has broken out over the past couple of seasons. Not enough to urge the league to crack down on the rules that appear in the NHL Rulebook. You know the one, it's 61.1 and it's on page 86 and it says, "Any forceful or powerful chop with the stick on an opponent's body, the opponent's stick, or on or near the opponent's hands that, in the judgment of the referee, is not an attempt to play the puck, shall be penalized as slashing." But there is concern nonetheless. In fact, NHL director of hockey operations Colin Campbell went as far as to say, "There is some appetite to reducing slashing to the hands."

Strong words, eh? Gives you the impression they'll do something about it. But here's the thing. They talked about maybe someday doing something about perhaps calling penalties when a slash gets too close to the hands. They talk about these kinds of things a lot. Campbell actually said the league would have to educate players and referees on what is acceptable and what isn't when it comes to slashing. (Hey, how about none of it?) We're going to go out on a limb here and assume that you guys know what is a slash and what isn't. Campbell even said that one GM opined there may have been so many slashes to the hands because players might be concerned about taking a slashing penalty by breaking an opponent's stick. So they hit the hands instead. Seriously, we can't make this stuff up.

What we also can't make up is that nobody really knows when slashing is going to be called and when it's not. The league reported at that meeting that it broke down the number of slashes in four NHL playoff games, the Memorial Cup final and the NCAA title game and found a low of 60 slashes and a high of 110 in those games. "We showed them 10, we showed them fast motion and slow motion and we asked their input on that play, penalty or not a penalty?" Campbell said. "And we didn't get a feel of the room. My gut feel on this is if you slash any place around the hands, it should be a penalty." Like we said, you know, the way it says in the rulebook.

SO WE'RE ASKING FOR YOU GUYS TO BE THE ONES WHO DRIVE THIS AGENDA. IF YOU WANT THIS GARBAGE TO STOP, YOU'RE GOING TO HAVE TO TAKE THE LEAD

It's apparent the only things this league can be clear and definitive on is that it really, really hates diving and it doesn't want to go to the Olympics. So we're asking for you guys, the players, to be the ones who drive this agenda. Take a look at the Sidney Crosby slash on Marc Methot that almost severed Methot's finger and gave him what he said was the worst injury of his career. Casual slash. Nothing terribly malicious about it, one that happens between 60 and 110 times a game. So of course there was no call. Take a look at the one that ended up breaking Johnny Gaudreau's finger and knocked him out of the Calgary Flames' lineup for 10 games. No call on that one, either. Or the 20 previous slashes Gaudreau received in that game.

So here's the deal. If you want this garbage to stop, you're going to have to take the lead here. We get that it's a competitive game and part of the DNA of a hockey player is to get away with as much as you're able. But here's the thing, guys. You go on and on about 'The Code,' whatever the heck that is, as something that should never, ever be broken. Well, shouldn't it be in 'The Code' that you don't go around slashing each other on the hands? You guys insist that fighting be part of the game because it allows players to police themselves, but why not use that same sense of integrity to police your own behavior?

You know it's wrong. You also know that good, honest players, the ones who "play the game the right way," use smarts and speed and body positioning to stop their opponents from scoring or to take the puck away from them. And you've seen when things like the Methot or Gaudreau injuries happen, enablers of all kinds come out of the woodwork and blame defective equipment and short-cuff gloves.

And deep down, you know it's all a bunch of hooey. The league is going to ruminate on this and talk about it and ruminate on it some more. In the meantime, the hacks and whacks will keep coming. Only you can make it stop. Only you can fix this.

Yours truly,

Ken Campbell
